Atomic Fragments Mary Palevsky, 2000-06-29 More than most of us Mary Palevsky needed to come to terms with the moral complexities of the atomic bomb Her parents worked on its development during World War II and were profoundly changed by that experience After they died unanswered questions sent their daughter on a search for understanding This compelling sometimes heart wrenching chronicle is the story of that quest It takes her and us on a journey into the minds memories and emotions of the bomb builders Scientists Hans Bethe Edward Teller Joseph Rotblat Herbert York Philip Morrison and Robert Wilson and philosopher David Hawkins responded to Palevsky's personal approach in a way that dramatically expands their previously published statements Her skill and passion as an interlocutor prompt these men to recall their lives vividly and to reexamine their own decisions debating within themselves the complex issues raised by the bomb The author herself seeking to comprehend the widely differing ways in which individual scientists made choices about the bomb and made sense of their work deeply reconsiders those questions of commitment and conscience her parents faced In personal vignettes that complement the interviews she captures other remembrances of the bomb through commemorative events and chance encounters with people who were there Her concluding chapter reframes the crucial moral questions in terms that show the questions themselves to be the abiding legacy we all share This beautifully written book bridges generations to make its readers participants in the ongoing dialogue about science and philosophy war and peace always imagined a journal that would take me through my seventy ninth year May Sarton writes the doors opening out from old age to unknown efforts and surprises Instead of musing calmly on the philosophical implications of aging the writer found herself spending most of her energy battling for her health Coping with constant pain and increasing frailty Sarton fears that the end is not far off The story of what she calls the last laps of a long distance runner this yearlong journal addresses such familiar Sarton topics as her beloved garden the harshness of Maine winters and the friendships and intimate relationships that have nurtured and sustained her She settles some old literary scores and paints a generous portrait of Virginia Woolf who often shared tea with Sarton during the late 1930s When illness saps Sarton s ability to type she dictates into recorders and has the tapes transcribed by devoted assistants In spite of the loss of independence and the fear that she will never fully recover she does her best to soldier on taking pleasure in small things like a good meal her cat Pierrot who loves the rain and being able to sleep through the night An enduring inspiration to millions of women Sarton even finds the courage to achieve again
