I Got A Family:

In Defence of Country Noah Riseman, 2016-01-19 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people have been protecting country since time immemorial. One way they have continued these traditions in recent times is through service in the Australian military both overseas and within Australia. In Defence of Country presents a selection of life stories of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander ex-servicemen and women who served in the Australian Army, Navy and Air Force after World War Two. In their own words, participants discuss a range of issues including why they joined up, racial discrimination, the Stolen Generations, leadership, discipline, family, war and peace, education and skills development, community advocacy and their hopes for the future of Indigenous Australia. Individually and collectively, the life stories in this book highlight the many contributions that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander servicemen and women have made and continue to make in defence of country.

Galyat T. A. Baran, 2002 David Stone realized at a very early age that he had the ability to manipulate powerful individuals by demanding their attention. He learned that size and strength mean nothing when confronted with willpower. Unfortunately, David finds that his feelings of power are accompanied by feelings of worthlessness. An anger in him builds from the fact that people will only respond to him after an exhausting show of extreme behavior. David's victories are sad ones, but they are all he has. Eventually, David channels his anger through radical organizations. His talent for influencing others quickly leads him to leadership positions. As leader and spokesperson for these organizations, David finds that his need for power is more important than any ideal held by the groups, and he wonders at what he has become.
