Exploring the Guidelines for Library Services to Distance Education Programs ... Clara Latham, 2005 Distance education coursework taken outside the traditional campus classroom setting has become increasingly popular over the years as students seek to improve their marketability while currently employed or otherwise prevented from attending colleges as resident students Universities which offer distance education programs continually seek to enhance their appeal to students by providing programs that are convenient and as equivalent to their resident programs as possible Services provided to distance learning students must be equivalent even if provided in a different manner to that provided for on campus students The research project undertaken seeks to explore the various elements of providing library services to distance education programs The elements of these services are analyzed relative to the Association of College and Research Libraries Guidelines for Distance Learning Library Services The question of useful standards is thoroughly analyzed in order to clarify the role of library service in the overall provision of distance education programs The ACRL Guidelines the most complete guidelines available for measuring library services for distance education programs are a standard set of guidelines recognized by all levels of higher education as created by a well respected authoritative agency By rating these guidelines operational definitions are set in order to analyze services provided by various libraries in different settings and sizes The major categories of the guidelines management finances personnel facilities resources services documentation and library education are converted into measurable operational activities A questionnaire is sent to library services representatives either distance education librarians or directors in universities across the United States who agreed to participate asking that the guidelines be rated for usefulness and practicality from essential to useless Analyzing the questionnaire responses reveal several concepts A partnership between the distance education library staff and the computing center is one of the most essential concepts Adequate funding for the distance education component of library services is considered essential by the respondents as is easy to access virtual services Another essential concept revealed in the study is timeliness of delivery of materials A complete summary of the results and recommendations for further study in this area comprise the remainder of the research presentation

Distance Education and the Changing Role of the Library Media Specialist Michael A. Burke, 1989 This monograph looks at the need for distance education technology as a result of demographic and socioeconomic changes and examines the role of the school library media program in facilitating the changes in education resulting from the utilization of distance education technology The first section presents the mission of the school library media program as envisioned in guidelines for library media specialists published by two national professional organizations in 1988 discusses four challenges inherent in that mission and gives examples of current responses to these challenges Section 2 deals with changes in demographics that the educational system needs to address as the year 2000 is approached and the third section provides a synopsis of the use of distance education technology and how it is being used to address the changing needs of students and staff Section 4 reviews how school districts in northeastern Wisconsin are using distance education technology to enhance learning opportunities for students and the community and to expand opportunities for staff development staff communication and resource sharing Sections 5 and 6 deal with the role of the library media specialist in integrating distance education programming into elementary and secondary education A map of instructional television sites in Wisconsin and a Satellite Educational Resources Consortium fact sheet are appended 93 references MES
