American Literary Masters Charles Roberts Anderson, 1965 American Literary Masters Leon Henry Vincent, 1969 American Literary Masters Leon Henry Vincent, 1906 Paraliterary Merve Emre, 2017-11-16 Literature departments are staffed by and tend to be focused on turning out good readers attentive to nuance aware of history interested in literary texts as self contained works But the vast majority of readers are to use the author s tongue in cheek term bad readers They read fiction and poetry to be moved distracted instructed improved engaged as citizens The author of this book argues that we should think of such readers not as non literary but as paraliterary thriving outside the institutions we take as central to the literary world She traces this phenomenon to the postwar period when literature played a key role in the rise of American power At the same time as American universities were producing good readers by the hundreds many more thousands of bad readers were learning elsewhere to be disciplined public communicators whether in diplomatic and ambassadorial missions private and public cultural exchange programs multinational corporations or global activist groups As we grapple with literature s diminished role in the public sphere she suggests a new way to think about literature its audience and its potential one that looks at the civic institutions that have long engaged readers ignored by the academy
