Literacy in the New Media Age Gunther R. Multimodal Literacies and Emerging Genres Tracey Bowen, Carl Whithaus, 2013-04-09 A student's avatar navigates a virtual world and communicates the desires, emotions and fears of its creator. Yet how can her writing instructor interpret this form of meaning-making? Today multiple modes of communication and information technology are challenging pedagogies in composition and across the disciplines. Writing instructors grapple with incorporating new forms into their curriculums and relating them to established literary practices. Administrators confront the application of new technologies to the restructuring of courses and the classroom itself. Multimodal Literacies and Emerging Genres examines the possibilities, challenges and realities of multimodal composition as an effective means of communication. The chapters view the ways that writing instructors and their students are exploring the spaces where communication occurs while also asking what else is possible. The genres of film, audio, photography, graphics, speeches, storyboards, PowerPoint presentations, virtual environments, written works and others are investigated to discern both their capabilities and limitations. The contributors highlight the responsibility of instructors to guide students in the consideration of their audience and ethical responsibility while also maintaining the ability to speak well. Additionally, they focus on the need for programmatic changes and a shift in institutional philosophy to close a possible digital divide and remain relevant in digital and global economies. Embracing and advancing multimodal communication is essential to both higher education and students. The contributors therefore call for the examination of how writing programs, faculty and administrators are responding to change and how the many purposes writing serves can effectively converge within composition curricula.

Critical Literacies in Action, 2008-01-01 Critical Literacies in Action: Social Perspectives and Teaching Practices asks how educators can become more experienced in order to truly support literacy, particularly for children of poverty or for those who have been labeled at risk. This is especially important in current times since a literate individual is one who is more successfully able to situate him or herself within a continuum of lifelong learning in order to fulfill personal goals and to participate fully within the wider societal context. Although the word literacy has been with us for a very long time, the very meaning of the term itself has become increasingly complex due to a multiplicity of factors. At least in part, this complexity is a function of expanding and interconnecting notions of what it is that constitutes modern literacy as well as the increasingly technological nature of the world within which individuals live and learn. As such, a new horizon in literacy research has appeared, promising to renegotiate traditional definitions of the term literate and what it means to be critically literate in this increasingly complex world. Definitions of literacy have also evolved along with the evolution of the computer. Currently, the term literacy describes a commitment to and participation in a multiplicity of meaning-making systems, many of which exhibit ever greater degrees of interdependence with one another. The term Critical Literacy has come into use relatively recently and is generally regarded as a sub-category of Critical Pedagogy. Critical because it promotes an agenda for positive social change.
