Literacy Writing Reading And Social Organisation:

Literacy John Oxenham, 2017-11-27 Originally published in 1980 The skills of reading and writing have been proclaimed as universal human rights This book explores why this should be so In particular it examines whether or not the possession of reading or writing skills has or has not influenced the values and organisation of society Viewing literacy as a technology the author maintains that like all technologies it is created by man for limited purposes Nevertheless given the right conditions it can be used by man to change not only other technologies but also himself and in the end all of his society But like other technologies literacy too may be subject to obsolescence which poses the all important question of whether the advent of universal literacy has coincided with the redundancy of the written word The SAGE Handbook of Writing Development

Literacies, Power and Identities in Figured Worlds in Malawi Ahmmardouh Mjaya, 2022-02-24 This book is based on an in depth ethnographic study of the National Adult Literacy Programme NALP in Malawi It highlights the significance of exploring power and identity in literacy studies Employing the concept of figured worlds to study literacy as a social practice the book focuses on understanding power relationships and identities in literacy practices It illustrates how literacy identities and power relationships of some local community members continuously vary from one context to another and in some cases even within the same context Using notions such as agency artefact resistance shame and positioning the book demonstrates the potential of the concept of figured worlds to address some of the questions raised within the New Literacy Studies especially those concerning power and identity The book also illustrates the value of an ethnographic approach in adult literacy studies by exploring the challenges faced by the researcher in gaining access to community members activities and the opportunity to experience first hand what instructors go through in facilitating adult literacy lessons Writing Groups

Education Richard M.S. Wilson,2014-04-29 Many enquiries into the state of accounting education training undertaken in several countries over the past 40 years have warned that it must change if it is to be made more relevant to students to the accounting profession and to stakeholders in the wider community This book s over riding aim is to provide a comprehensive and authoritative source of reference which defines the domain of accounting education training and which provides a critical overview of the state of this domain including emerging and cutting edge issues as a foundation for facilitating improved accounting education training scholarship and research in order to enhance the educational base of accounting practice The Routledge Companion to Accounting Education highlights the key drivers of change whether in the field of practice on the one hand e.g. increased regulation globalisation risk and complexity or from developments in the academy on the other e.g. pressures to embed technology within the classroom or to meet accreditation criteria on the other Thirty chapters written by leading scholars from around the world are grouped into seven themed sections which focus on different facets of their respective themes including student curriculum pedagogic and assessment considerations

Literacy, Information, and Development in Morocco during the 1990s Samia Touati, 2012-06-15 Literacy Information and Development in Morocco during the 1990s offers readers a two level investigation of the culture of literacy A handful of researchers approach literacy either through theory or through practice in general however this is the first study in the African context that tries to investigate the issue of literacy from both perspectives At the first level Touati provides an evaluation of the state policy towards literacy during the 1990s She places a particular emphasis on the motives and assumptions behind policy makers increasing interest in literacy Since 1990 the state has adopted a participatory approach which is based on a cross sector strategy that encourages both public and private institutions to take part in the dissemination of literacy This text explores the working factors that motivate Moroccan decision makers to support the campaign for greater literacy Such factors are founded on the assumption that providing literacy programs training and education are a means of furthering the country's development Moroccan officials also base their support for higher literacy rates on the belief that literacy is useful for both the individual and the society At the second level Touati offers an examination of the presumed benefits of literacy in Morocco Literacy has been found to engender many personal social and economic benefits but only when certain conditions are met These conditions include the political will to disseminate literacy the acknowledgement of the need for literacy in one's everyday life the availability of job opportunities and the eradication of poverty
