Emergent Issues in Human Decision Making Gerald M. Phillips, Julia T. Wood, 1984 A critical examination of the concept of decision making or consensus that has held sway in thinking about groups since its introduction in the 1930s As a part of the group dynamics movement the concept of consensus was accepted perhaps without adequate reflection regarding its nature and utility as a way of thinking about and teaching about group process The authors carefully define the concept trace it historically and critically evaluate its merit to create an understanding of what happens when groups of people come together to work things out The contributors are William K Rawlins Randy Y Hirokawa Nancy Wyatt Lynne Kelly Cynthia F Begnal Christopher Waagen Susan L Kline Janet M Ceropski and Paul G Friedman The result of their studies is the recognition that consensus is a concept not an entity or a state of being While an important concept that is useful as a critical tool it must be treated as a concept an abstraction created and used by those who wish to study how people reach collective agreements

Interorganizational Collaboration Renee Guarriello Heath, Matthew G. Isbell, 2017-03-08 Interorganizational Collaboration Complexity Ethics and Communication centers around three key assertions 1 interorganizational collaboration is complex and warrants study as a specific type of leadership and communication 2 successful collaborative relationships are grounded in a principled ethic of democratic and egalitarian participation and 3 interorganizational collaboration requires a specific communication language of practice Interorganizational collaboration is influenced by increased interconnectedness shifting organizational needs and a changing workforce Collaboration invokes ethical questions and ethical responsibilities that must be considered in communication practices and structures Although there are many popular books and practitioner materials on collaboration most are not focused on introducing foundational concepts to a novice audience In addition the subject of communication in collaboration has been somewhat underdeveloped The authors focus on communication from a social constructionist stance One of their primary goals is to develop a collaboration pedagogy based on existing communication scholarship The authors present communicative practices vital to interorganizational participation and they view collaboration as something beyond an exchange of resources and knowledge Unlike group and organizational texts that approach collaboration from a functional or strategic perspective this text anchors collaboration in the assumption that democratic and principled communication will foster creative and accountable outcomes for participants in collaborative problem solving The authors articulate a collaborative ethic useful in all communicative contexts Micropractices of communication are fundamental not only to collaborating across organizations but also to fostering just and trusting relationships The book discusses the cornerstone assumptions and principled practices necessary for stakeholders to address problems for example recognizing and validating the needs of fellow stakeholders separating people's positions from underlying interests listening for things that are never quite said identifying overlapping commonalities building trust while respecting difference and constructively navigating conflict The book also focuses on building collaborative praxis based on the assumption of contingency Praxis cultivates knowledge and ethical understanding of a situation so participants in collaborations can make the best decision based on specific circumstances Disaster
