Was Wide Henry Lawson,2020-07-02 The world is narrow and ways are short and our lives are dull and slow For little is new where the crowds resort and less where the wanderers go Greater or smaller the same old things we see by the dull road side And tired of all is the spirit that sings of the days when the world was wide When the North was hale in the march of Time and the South and the West were new And the gorgeous East was a pantomime as it seemed in our boyhood s view When Spain was first on the waves of change and proud in the ranks of pride And all was wonderful new and strange in the days when the world was wide Then a man could fight if his heart were bold and win if his faith were true Were it love or honour or power or gold or all that our hearts pursue Could live to the world for the family name or die for the family pride Could fly from sorrow and wrong and shame in the days when the world was wide They sailed away in the ships that sailed ere science controlled the main When the strong brave heart of a man prevailed as twill never prevail again They knew not whither nor much they cared let Fate or the winds decide The worst of the Great Unknown they dared in the days when the world was wide They raised new stars on the silent sea that filled their hearts with awe They came to many a strange countree and marvellous sights they saw The villagers gaped at the tales they told and old eyes glistened with pride When barbarous cities were paved with gold in the days when the world was wide Twas honest metal and honest wood in the days of the Outward Bound When men were gallant and ships were good roaming the wide world round The gods could envy a leader then when Follow me lads he cried They faced each other and fought like men in the days when the world was wide They tried to live as a freeman should they were happier men than we In the glorious days of wine and blood when Liberty crossed the sea Twas a comrade true or a foeman then and a trusty sword well tried They faced each other and fought like men in the days when the world was wide The good ship bound for the Southern seas when the beacon was Ballarat With a Ship ahoy on the freshening breeze Where bound and What ship s that The emigrant train to New Mexico the rush to the Lachlan Side Ah faint is the echo of Westward Ho from the days when the world was wide South East and West in advance of Time and ay in advance of Thought Those brave men rose to a height sublime and is it for this they fought And is it for this damned life we praise the god like spirit that died At Eureka Stockade in the Roaring Days with the days when the world was wide
