Indo European Classification:

An Indoeuropean Classification Isidore Dyen, Joseph B. Kruskal, Paul Black, 1992 The lexicostatistical method is frequently used to gain information about family trees of languages which are not accessible in study by more traditional methods The first major purpose of this work is to validate the lexicostatistical method by presenting the classification it yields for the Indoeuropean family comparing that classification with the traditional one If the classification it yields had differed greatly from the generally accepted one some would have found that reason enough to challenge the method The differences however appear to be relatively small subject to reasonable explanations Consequently this classification can be regarded as a principal confirmation of the validity of the lexicostatistical method Illustrations The Indo-European Language

Categories and Classifications N. J. Allen, 2000 From reflections on such works in translation as the 1938 essay The Person by seminal French sociocultural anthropologist Marcel Mauss 1872 1950 and Primitive Classification 1903 which Mauss coauthored with his uncle mentor sociologist Emile Durkheim Allen offers his Maussian influenced ideas on the origins of human society magic religion and Indo European ideology Only the last chapter is original to this text The titles and dates of Mauss lectures are appended The author acknowledges the Institute of Social and Cultural Anthropology at Oxford c Book News Inc Nominal Classification Marcin Kilarski, 2013-12-18 This book offers the first comprehensive survey of the study of gender and classifiers throughout the history of Western linguistics Based on an analysis of over 200 genetically and typologically diverse languages the author shows that these seemingly arbitrary and redundant categories play in fact a central role in the lexicon grammar and the organization of discourse As a result the often contradictory approaches to their functionality and semantic motivation encapsulate the evolving conceptions of such issues as cognitive and cultural correlates of linguistic structure the diverse functions of grammatical categories linguistic complexity agreement phenomena and the interplay between lexicon and grammar The combination of a typological and historiographic perspective adopted here allows the reader to appreciate the detail and insight of earlier supposedly prescientific accounts in light of the data now available and to examine contemporary discussions in the context of prevailing conceptions in the study of language at different points in its history since antiquity
