International Competitiveness And Environmental Policies:

International Competitiveness and Environmental Policies Terry Barker, Jonathan Köhler, 1998 A study of the problem which arises when government policies for reducing environmental pollution are criticised as adversely affecting international competitiveness It shows how well designed market oriented policies can improve both domestic and international competitiveness

International Trade and Environmental Regulation Xinpeng Xu, 1999 This book sets out to examine one of the most important issues on trade and the environment namely the trade effects of domestic environmental policy The central question addressed is whether stringent domestic environmental policies reduce the international competitiveness of environmentally sensitive industries This study is distinguished by two major innovations that go beyond the established literature the examination of time series evidence to explore the relationship between environmental regulations and trade patterns and the introduction of technology factors together with endowment factors to explain the empirical evidence To theoretically explore the dynamic linkage between environmental regulation technological innovation and economic growth the author sets up an intertemporal dynamic general equilibrium model in which the more fundamental dynamic determinant of economic growth is its capacity for technological innovation The basic findings are that 1 changes in the stringency of environmental regulations do not have long run growth effects and 2 technological innovation is an important determinant of a country's long run growth The emphasis of this book is that the trade effects of domestic environmental policy can be better understood if one allows for a dynamic Ricardian technology factor in the conventional Heckscher Ohlin framework Innovation and subsequent increases in relative labour productivity together with factor endowments are important factors in determining the relationship between environmental regulation and international competitiveness This result should help refocus the debate on the relationship between environmental regulation and competitiveness in international trade

Unilateral Environmental Policy and International Competitiveness Christian M. Scholz, Frank Stähler, 1999 Global Competition and EU Environmental Policy Jonathan Golub, 1998-03-19 Global Competition and EU Environmental Policy is the first book to examine the relationship between economic competitiveness and environmental protection in European Union policy A wide range of international case studies addresses key agreements and policies including those dealing with ozone layer protection pesticide exports shipping climate

Theory and Policy of International Competitiveness Fidelis Ezeala-Harrison, 1999-04-30 How a country competes in the world is the crucial factor in determining that country's ability to benefit from international trade in today's global economy This book offers a complete and proper understanding of the meaning of international competitiveness analyzes the implications it holds for an economy's progress examines how it may be pursued and sustained at both the sectoral level firms and industries and the national level strategic objectives The author offers pertinent policy guidelines and prescriptions for how a nation can achieve and maintain international competitiveness in order to sustain the long term prosperity of its industries and hence the overall pace of economic growth The book is arranged into three parts Part I discusses and defines the theories of international competitiveness Part II deals with policy issues specifically the policy analysis of structural reforms for promoting a country's ability to compete the impact of globalization and the role of Communication and Information Technology CIT strategic trade policies and environmental issues Part III analyzes the strategies used to pursue competitiveness The book will be useful for researchers students and teachers of business and economics as well as policy makers business practitioners and international and governmental agencies

Economic Growth, International Competitiveness and Environmental Protection
Carlo Carraro, Marzio Galeotti, 2012 It is often argued that policies designed to protect the environment may harm economic growth Moreover if introduced unilaterally by a given country they may reduce the competitiveness of domestic firms These arguments are generally based on the assumption that environmental protection has to be achieved through the introduction of emission charges e.g. a carbon tax However three issues need to be raised first the tax is not the only policy instrument and is not the most efficient one that can be used to reduce polluting emissions secondly even when a tax policy is implemented it is important to assess the feedback effects induced by recycling the tax revenue thirdly and most importantly the role of technical progress cannot be neglected Therefore there may exist a policy mix that provides firms with the correct incentives to adopt energy saving technologies and to invest in environment friendly R D The first two issues have partly been explored both in the theoretical and empirical literature The third issue i.e. the role of incentives to technical progress still lacks adequate quantitative assessment This is why a new model has been developed which endogenizes technical progress and its effects and feedbacks on economic energy and environmental variables Using WARM an econometric general equilibrium model for the European Union and for each member country this paper presents simulation results up to 2015 of the effects of some industrial environmental policies which are aimed at protecting the environment without necessarily damaging competitiveness and economic growth The results show that policies that stimulate environmental R D technological innovation and diffusion may provide firms with the correct incentives to avoid damaging the environment while preserving their competitiveness in the market Moreover such a policy based both on R D subsidies and on innovation incentives may not worsen the public sector budget balance as a result of the positive effects on economic growth

Import Tariffs as Environmental Policy Instruments C. Kraus, 2013-06-29 The theoretical claims for eco tariffs are rigorously analyzed within a unified framework formed of an international trade model enriched with both a domestic and a global externality During the course of the analysis the model is modified to analyze an array of contexts for which eco tariffs have been claimed to improve environmental quality or welfare The circumstances and conditions are characterised under which such tariffs can be shown to improve environmental quality and social welfare taking account of general equilibrium effects The theoretical results are applied in a policy analysis of eco tariffs and other trade instruments in the context of domestic and global environmental policy in order to assess the relevance of the eco tariffs that have been subjected to the theoretical analysis Finally the GATT WTO rules and regulations are presented since to date these have banned the use of eco tariffs The rules and regulations are mapped against the theoretical results to show which rules ought to be changed

Essays on Environmental Policies and International Competitiveness Claire Brunel, 2015 The final chapter co authored with Arik Levinson identifies the data and conceptual challenges of measuring the stringency of environmental policies a central issue for any paper that studies the effects of environmental policies In this paper we also propose an improved emissions based measure of stringency

Environmental Regulation, Economic Growth and International Competitiveness Stuart Harris, 1993 Unilateral Environmental Policy and International Competitiveness Christian M. Scholz, Frank Stähler, 1999 Internationalization of the Economy and Environmental Policy Options Paul J.J.

The Influence of National Competition Policy on the International Competitiveness of Nations Andreas Mitschke, 2008-05-05 Does every open economy profit from economic globalization Why do some countries profit more than others What role does national economic policy play with regard to a nation's potential to profit from economic globalization Is there a need for an international harmonization of economic policy in order to protect global competition and to prevent international conflicts or to the contrary is national economic policy a crucial and indispensable instrument for fostering the international competitiveness of an economy These questions were the starting point for a research project of the department of Economics at the University of Nuremberg in 2003 The intention was to take a fresh look at the various harmonization claims which have been raised both in economic literature and by politicians As politicians in general simultaneously also strive for enhancing the international competitiveness of their nation the project aimed at the relation between harmonization claims on the one hand and the competitiveness debate on the other The decision to set the focus of this project on the role of competition policy has been triggered against the background of the ongoing debate on international competition rules In October 2001 the International Competition Network ICN has been established in New York Furthermore the Doha Ministerial Declaration of November 2001 envisaged WTO negotiations on international competition rules

Anglo-American Relations Alan Dobson, Steve Marsh, 2013-01-17 This book provides an examination of contemporary Anglo American relations Sometimes controversially referred to as the Special Relationship Anglo American relations constitute arguably the most important bilateral relationship
