Linderman,2015-07-04 Excerpt from Lige Mounts Free Trapper I came to Montana Territory when I was a boy The country was wild and essentially a land of youth Men referred to as old Bill or old Hank were often in their prime and proud of their strength and fitness Their ways were those of a wilderness unspoiled and primitiveness traditional a proof of character An extra blanket or frying pan in their meagre packs was disgraceful and in the eyes of his fellows lessened the possessor s worth as a good man The life they led fascinated me and I became a trapper with them my partner being a man who had grown gray in the wilderness He felt a pride in owning a fast horse a dead centre rifle the shortest camp equipment and the scantiest bed roll in the Territory and nothing stirred him as did the sight of a fence I shall never forget his displeasure and chagrin when he learned that Montana had ceased to be a Territory and had become a State in the Union Now she s gone to hell for keeps he sighed And I believed him He knew the ways of the Indian and through him I became the Indian s friend learning more than he had known of their customs and beliefs although after so many years of acquaintance the Indian remains to mo still a man of mystery About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com

Fifty Years After The Big Sky William E. Farr, William W. Bevis, 2001. Writers, historians, and public intellectuals from James Welch and Mary Clearman Blew to Dan Flores, William W. Bevis, and Daniel Kemmis explore A. B. Guthrie's life and legacy in Fifty Years after The Big Sky: New Perspectives on the Fiction and Films of A. B. Guthrie Jr. Best known for his novels The Big Sky and The Way West and as the author of the screenplay for the movie classic Shane, A. B. Guthrie is a much-loved but under-studied Montana author. There has been almost no serious study of Guthrie's work until now. This wide-ranging anthology examines this beloved western author in multiple contexts. Essays examine Guthrie's relationship with the movie industry, how the Cold War influenced Guthrie's work, how people in his hometown of Choteau, Montana, and others close to him remember the man, and how the myths that lie at the core of Guthrie's fiction haunt today's Montanans. The Publishers Weekly, 1922 Bulletin of the Public Library of the City of Boston, Boston Public Library, 1923 Bulletin [1908-23], Boston Public Library, 1923 Bookseller and Stationer, 1922 The Frontier, 1921

A memoir expresses the poverty, personal hardships, and prejudice of the author's life growing up as a second-generation Crow Indian on a reservation and the bond she formed with her grandmother, a medicine woman. A

Literary History of the American West, Western Literature Association (U.S.), 1987. Literary histories of course do not have a reason for being unless there exists the literature itself. This volume, perhaps more than others of its kind, is an expression of appreciation for the talented and dedicated literary artists who ignored the odds, avoided temptations to write for popularity or prestige, and chose to write honestly about the American West, believing that experiences long known to be of historical importance are also experiences that need and deserve a literature of importance.
