Lightning in a Drought Year Michelle Black,1999 Flathead National Forest (N.F.), Logan Creek Ecosystem Restoration Project ,2004 Victims of the Environment James D. Wright,Peter H. Rossi,Joseph A. Pereira,Eleanor Weber-Burdin,2012-12-06 The research reported in this volume was designed to provide estimates of the extent of damages and injuries from certain natural hazards inflicted on households in the United States In addition it reports on sources of aid proffered to households and the extent to which there are differences among households in the receipt of help This volume represents the latest installment in a series of monographs stemming from the Social and Demographic Research Institute's SADRI program of research on the effects of natural hazard events in the United States The first volume in our series Wright Rossi Wright Weber Burdin 1979 reported on the long range effects of natural hazards on the population and housing stocks of neighborhoods and communities The second volume Rossi et al 1982 assessed the support for hazard mitigation policies existing among local and state political elites in a sample of states and local communities in the United States The main findings of these two monographs can be summarized as follows First long range effects up to 10 years postevent of natural hazard events are minimal Local communities and neighborhoods that have been impacted by floods tornadoes or hurricanes appear to be no different in their population and housing growth patterns over the period 1960 to 1970 than comparable communities that went unscathed Apparently household and community resources plus outside aid were sufficient ordinarily to restore impacted areas to normal growth patterns Hearings, Reports and Prints of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Agriculture and Forestry,1974 Fire Ecology of Florida and the Southeastern Coastal Plain Reed F. Noss,2024-11-26 An overview of the importance of fire to ecosystems in the Southeast with guidance on how to best conduct controlled burns in the region A biodiversity hotspot Florida is home to many ecosystems and species that evolved in the presence of frequent fire In this book Reed Noss discusses the essential role of fire in generating biodiversity and offers best practices for using fire to keep the region's ecosystems healthy and resilient Reviewing several lines of evidence Noss shows that fire has been important to the southeastern Coastal Plain for tens of millions of years He explains how the region's natural fire regimes are connected to its climate high rate of lightning strikes physical chemistry and vegetation But urbanization and active fire suppression have reduced the frequency and extent of fires Noss suggests the practice of controlled burning can and should be improved to protect fire dependent species and natural communities from decline and extinction Noss argues that fire managers should attempt to simulate natural fire regimes when conducting controlled burns Based on what the species of the Southeast likely experienced during their evolutionary histories he makes recommendations about pyrodiversity how often and in what seasons to burn the optimal heterogeneity of burns mechanical treatments such as cutting and roller chopping and the proper use of fuel breaks In doing so Noss is the first to apply the new discipline of evolutionary fire ecology to a specific region This book is a fascinating history of fire ecology in Florida an enlightening look at why fire matters to the region and a necessary resource for conservationists and fire managers in the state and elsewhere Storm Data United States. Environmental Data Service,2002 Seasonal Flood Forecasts and Warning Response Opportunities Md. Rashed Chowdhury,2022-11-16 This book explores the feasibility of using El Niño Southern Oscillation ENSO based forecasts and early warning systems to prevent losses from floods and droughts in Bangladesh Despite advances in short range flood forecasting and information dissemination systems in Bangladesh the present system is less than satisfactory This is due to short lead time products outdated dissemination networks and lack of direct feedback from the end user One viable solution is to produce long lead seasonal forecasts the demand for which is significantly increasing in Bangladesh and disseminate these products through appropriate channels As observed in other regions the success of seasonal forecasts in contrast to short term forecasts depends on consensus among the participating institutions Therefore the primary objective of the book is to revisit and modify the framework of an ideal warning response system for issuance of consensus seasonal flood forecasts in Bangladesh The book discusses issues related to the 5 stage Flood Forecasts Warning and Response System FFWRS and emphasizes the role of the seasonal Climate Outlook Forum COF in Bangladesh The book also identifies ways to improve forecasting and early warning systems by utilizing ENSO based climate data and models and discusses a comprehensive and participatory approach to seasonal flood hazard management in Bangladesh Several successful case examples of ENSO based seasonal forecasts and early warning systems from other ENSO sensitive regions have been documented The primary audience includes academics and students government policymakers engineers and business leaders Quarterly Journal of the Royal Meteorological Society Royal Meteorological Society (Great Britain),1911 Vols 10 11 include Meteorology of England by James Glaisher as separately paged section at end Fire in California's Ecosystems Neil G. Sugihara,2006-11-29 Focusing on California and issues specific to fire ecology and management in the state's bioregions this work provides scientific information for use in land restoration and other management decisions made in the field It introduces the basics of fire ecology and includes an overview of fire vegetation and climate in California and more Book Review Index ,2003 Vols 8 10 of the 1965 1984 master cumulation constitute a title index Ecological Systems of the Geobiosphere Heinrich Walter,Siegmar W.
