In Vitro Fertilization and Embryo Transfer Don P.

Wolf, 2012-12-06 The use of human in vitro fertilization in the management of infertility is the outgrowth of years of laboratory observations on in vitro sperm egg interaction The editors of this work have themselves contributed significantly to basic knowledge of the mammalian fertilization process The observations of Don Wolf on sperm penetration the block to polyspermy and most recently sperm hyperactivation in the monkey and human Gregory Kopf's elucidation of the mechanisms of sperm activation during penetration and the reciprocal dialogue between sperm and egg and Barry Bavister's definition of culture conditions and requirements necessary for in vitro oocyte maturation fertilization and development in model mammalian systems including nonhuman primates have contributed greatly to our understanding of the mammalian fertilization process Wolf Kopf and Gerrity have enjoyed substantial interaction with clinicians in Departments of Obstetrics and Gynecology and have been directly involved with successful IVF programs Both Wolf and Kopf have served as research scientists in the Division of Reproductive Biology at the University of Pennsylvania which for more than 22 years has fostered co mingling of clinically oriented and basic science faculty It is through such interaction which clearly exists at many institutions including the University of Wisconsin that the process of technology transfer is best served Without an exquisitely coordinated laboratory there can be no consistent success in human in vitro fertilization Quality control is pivotal but close collaboration between the laboratory and the clinic is also essential as information is shared and correlated

Chimpanzees in Research National Research Council, Commission on Life Sciences, Institute for Laboratory Animal Research, Committee on Long-Term Care of Chimpanzees, 1997-08-18 Chimpanzees in biomedical and behavioral research constitute a national resource that has been valuable in addressing national health needs Facilities that house chimpanzees owned and supported by the National Institutes of Health NIH have successfully met the research requirements of the scientific community The captive chimpanzee population in the United States has grown substantially particularly over the last decade That growth is due primarily to the success of the NIH sponsored Chimpanzee Breeding and Research Program which achieved the birth numbers thought necessary to meet the projected needs of biomedical research However the expected level of use of the chimpanzee model in biomedical research did not materialize and that has created a complex problem that threatens both the availability of chimpanzees for research in the future and the infrastructure required to ensure the well being of captive chimpanzees used in biomedical research Because the present system is fragmented it is impossible to formulate an accurate overview of the size and nature of the chimpanzee population But if the chimpanzee is to continue to be used in biomedical research responsibly effectively and cost effectively we must be able to oversee track and coordinate the maintenance and use of chimpanzees and to control the size of the population To assess the long range situation and to develop implement and monitor the application of policies for the proper use and care of chimpanzees an authoritative centralized oversight structure is imperative Once it is in place it will be possible to refine and implement this report's recommendations

Primates Kurt Benirschke, 2012-12-06 This conference represents the first time in my life when I felt it was a misfortune rather than a major cause of my happiness that I do conservation work in New Guinea Yes it is true that New Guinea is a fascinating microcosm it has fascinating birds and people and it has large expanses of undisturbed rainforest In the course of my work there helping the Indonesian government and World Wildlife Fund set up a comprehensive national park system I have been able to study animals in areas without any human population But New Guinea has one serious drawback it has no primates except for humans Thus I come to this conference on primate conservation as an underprivileged and emotionally deprived observer rather than as an involved participant Nevertheless it is easy for anyone to become interested in primate conservation The public cares about primates More specifically to state things more realistically many people care some of the time about some primates Primates are rivaled only by birds pandas and the big cats in their public appeal For some other groups of animals the best we can say is that few people care about them infrequently For most groups of animals no one cares about them ever

A Comparative Overview of Mammalian Fertilization Bonnie S. Dunbar, M.G. O'Rand, 2013-06-29 In 1964 the Fertilization and Gamete Physiology Research Training Program FERGAP was established at the Marine Biological Laboratories Woods Hole Massachusetts Over the course of the next 12 years under the directorship of Dr Charles B Metz FERGAP brought together trained and inspired a generation of students in reproductive biology from all over the world As students of C B Metz and as FERGAP trainees we would like to dedicate this collected work on comparative mammalian fertilization to our teacher and mentor Dr Charles B Metz Like a number of authors contributing to this volume we have been struck by the significant impact that C B Metz and FERGAP had on the development of students of reproductive biology Applying both the classical and molecular techniques of cell biology and immunology to problems of gamete biology Dr Metz emphasized a comparative and analytical approach that was reflected in his own research on fertilization in Paramecia sea urchins frogs and mammals It is hoped that this volume will serve to stimulate students to discover the myriad of fascinating research problems in gamete and reproductive biology
