Inclusionary Housing Programs:

Inclusionary Housing Programs Alan Mallach,1984 Inclusionary Housing: The Impact of Program Flexibility on Program Success Amanda R. Gold,2016 Inclusionary zoning is an increasingly popular and controversial tool for creating affordable housing More than 500 jurisdictions have inclusionary zoning ordinances Despite the popularity of inclusionary programs nationwide research on the subject is largely fragmented and there is a real dearth of empirical research to support policymakers in their decision to implement inclusionary housing Specifically cities lack sufficient information about the most successful policy structures and the environment to which they are best suited This study addresses that gap exploring the extent to which more flexible inclusionary housing programs in California produce more affordable housing Local Government Initiatives for Affordable Housing Seymour I. Schwartz,1981 Creating Affordable Communities Shoshana Zatz,1994 The History of Inclusionary Housing Programs in California ,1983 Provides a brief overview of the reasons inclusionary housing programs have been adopted in a number of California cities and counties in recent years The factors which have contributed to successful program implementation are also discussed
