Individual And Family Development A Life Span Interdisciplinary Approach:

Individual and Family Development Jerry J. Bigner, 1994 Life-Span Communication Loretta L. Pecchioni, Kevin B. Wright, Jon F. Nussbaum, 2006-04-21 This innovative text emphasizes how communicative processes develop, are maintained, and change throughout the life span. Topics covered include language skills, interpersonal conflict management, socialization, care giving, and relationship development. Core chapters examine specific communication processes from infancy through childhood and adolescence into middle age and later life. In its exploration of the role of communication in human development, this volume overviews the theoretical and methodological issues related to studying communication across the life span, discusses foundations of communication, cognitive processes, and language, examines communication in relational contexts, and communication competencies, considers communication in leisure and the media with relevance to the life span perspective, and presents the implications of the life span perspective for future research. This text is intended to be used in life span communication courses and in interpersonal communication courses with a life span focus at an advanced or graduate level. It may also be used in courses on family communication, aging, and language development. It will serve as a supplemental text for courses in psychology, family studies, personal relationships, linguistics, and language studies.

Communication Yearbook 26 William B. Gudykunst, 2003-01-30 This volume offers state of the art communication research representing media, interpersonal, intercultural, and other areas of communication. It is an important reference on current research for scholars and students in the social sciences. Research Manual in Child Development Lorraine Nadelman, 2003-10-03 This unique hands on lab manual in child development provides great ideas and resources for teaching research courses involving child subjects. It includes projects in psychomotor, perceptual, cognitive, and social development. Projects are preceded by background essays on the history of that topic, related research, theoretical issues, and controversies. Each project has hypotheses to test, detailed procedures to follow, all stimuli, individual and group data sheets, empty tables, suggested statistics, discussion questions, and an updated bibliography. Special features of this second edition: The introductory text portion details research considerations including an introduction to psychological research, sections on developmental research, children as subjects, and general experimental research procedures. The popular Infant Observation project has the student visit homes with babies for a semester and provides practice in observational data collection, reliability assessment, and report writing. The cognitive development section includes two new subfields: Theory of Mind and Language. Children's Interpretation of the Word Big, in addition to classic studies of Piaget's spatial perspective, taking, and attention and memory. The final chapter describes a suggested neuropsychological project. The socialized child section includes a new study on sibling relationships as seen by the older or younger sibling, in addition to the earlier projects on self-esteem, sex identity, and cooperation/competition. The final section describes a suggested cross cultural interview project.

Childbearing and Careers of Japanese Women Born in the 1960s Yukiko Senda, 2015-05-11 This book provides the keys to understanding the trajectory that Japanese society has followed toward its lowest low fertility since the 1980s The characteristics of the life course of women born in the 1960s who were the first cohort to enter that trajectory are explored by using both qualitative and quantitative data analyses Among the many books explaining the decline in fertility this book is unique in four ways First it describes in detail the reality of factors concerning the fertility decline in Japan Second the book uses both qualitative and quantitative methods to introduce the whole picture of how the low fertility trend began in the 1980s and developed in the 1990s and thereafter Third the focus is on a specific birth cohort because their experiences determined the current patterns of family formation such as late marriage and postponed childbirth Fourth the book explores the knife edge balance between work and family conditions especially with regard to childbearing in the context of Japanese management and gender norms After examining the characteristics of demographic and socioeconomic circumstances of postwar Japan in detail it can be seen that the change in family formation first occurred drastically in the 1960s cohort Using both qualitative interview data cumulatively from 150 people and quantitative estimates with official statistics this book shows how individual level choices to balance work and family obligations resulted in a national level fertility decline Another focus of this book is the increasing unintended infertility due to postponed pregnancy a phenomenon that is attracting great social attention because the average age of pregnancy is approaching the biological limit This book is a valuable resource for researchers who are interested in the rapid fertility decline as well as the work life balance and the life course of women in Japanese employment practice and family traditions

Criminal Belief Systems Glenn D. Walters, 2002-09-30 Walters integrates information from traditional criminological models and findings from developmental psychology to form a system of five belief systems self view world view past view present view and future view designed to explain crime initiation and maintenance While reviewing belief systems that support crime Walters also offers a model of change through which belief systems incongruent with crime can be constructed He begins with a review of six traditional criminological models each of which is considered to possess sufficient breadth and substance to advance our understanding of crime Information gathered from these major theoretical systems is integrated with research from developmental psychology to create a system of crime congruent belief systems The belief systems along with recent research on attributions outcome expectancies efficacy expectancies values goals and thinking styles are then used to construct a general theory of crime and explain four specific categories of crime violent crime sexual assault white collar crime and drug trafficking Walters concludes with a model of assisted change whereby belief systems incongruent with crime are initiated and maintained with the intent of helping people abandon crime congruent lifestyles This change model revolves around four core elements responsibility confidence meaning community each of which is emphasized in a clinician's interactions with clients seeking to abandon crime congruent lifestyles As Walters maintains belief systems are instrumental in both the development and cessation of crime congruent lifestyles Of particular interest to scholars students researchers and practitioners involved with criminology criminal justice and clinical and correctional psychology Life-span Individual and Family Development Stella R. Social Change, Public Policy, and Community Collaborations Penny A. Ralston, Richard M. Lerner, Ann K. Mullis, Coby B. Simerly, John P. Murray, 2012-12-06 Lawton Chiles Governor of Florida 1991 1998 Social Change Public Policy and Community Collaborations Training Human Development Professionals for the Twenty First Century is more than the name of the Third National Applied Developmental Science Conference it is more than the name of a book prepared from the proceedings of this conference It describes one of the largest and most complex challenges facing state government higher education and communities in the coming decade The answer to this challenge will not be found in a college or program in our higher education institution nor in laws conceived and written in state capitals The answers to this challenge are to be found at the place where academia public policy and communities meet The problems and issues that are facing our children and families will require that all the players work together to develop community driven programs designed and evaluated using current research and staffed by highly trained professionals It will be critical that academia policy makers legislators and community members work together to ensure that the programs we design work We must ensure that research is being conducted so that programs that work better are continued and programs that don't are stopped

Sourcebook of Family Theories and Methods Pauline Boss, William J. Doherty, Ralph LaRossa, Walter R. Schumm, Suzanne K. Steinmetz, 2008-11-19 Origins We call this book on theoretical orientations and methodological strategies in family studies a sourcebook because it details the social and personal roots i.e. sources from which these orientations and strategies flow Thus an appropriate way to preface this book is to talk first of its roots its beginnings In the mid 1980s there emerged in some quarters the sense that it was time for family studies to take stock of itself A goal was thus set to write a book that like Janus would face both backward and forward a book that would give readers both a perspective on the past and a map for the future There were precedents for such a project The Handbook of Marriage and the Family edited by Harold Christensen and published in 1964 the two Contemporary Theories about the Family volumes edited by Wesley Burr Reuben Hill F. Ivan Nye and Ira Reiss published in 1979 and the Handbook of Marriage and the Family edited by Marvin Sussman and Suzanne Steinmetz then in production
