Chenango Canal The Million Dollar Ditch chronicles the story of a central New York State canal and how it changed the region In 1825 the Omnibus Canal Bill had called for a survey of a canal linking the Susquehanna River at Binghamton to the Erie Canal in Utica The idea of a canal was well received in the Chenango Valley but was opposed by many outside it After eight years of legislative battles the canal was finally authorized in 1833 with a proposed million dollar budget Against seeming insurmountable odds the 97 mile canal was completed in 1836 Touted as the best built canal in New York State the canal was never profitable for the state but it did bring a measure of prosperity to the communities along its length delivering cheap coal from Pennsylvania to emerging steam powered factories The Chenango Canal ,
