Facing Cancer and the Fear of Death Norman Straker, 2013 In Facing Cancer and the Fear of Death A Psychoanalytic Perspective on Treatment Dr Norman Straker proposes that death anxiety is responsible for the American society s failure to address costly futile care at the end of life more specifically doctors default on the appropriate prescription of palliative care because of this anxiety This leads to unnecessary suffering for terminally ill patients and their families and significant distress for physicians To address these challenges in the culture of medical education increased psychological support for physicians who treat dying patients is necessary Additionally physicians need to reach a consensus regarding the discontinuation of active treatments Psychoanalysts have traditionally denied the importance of death anxiety and report relatively few treatment cases of dying patients in their literature This book offers multiple treatment reports by psychoanalysts that illustrate the effectiveness and value of a flexible approach to patients facing death The psychoanalytic reader is expected to gain a greater level of comfort with facing death and is encouraged to consider making themselves more available to the ever increasing population of cancer survivors Further psychoanalysts are encouraged to be more useful partners to the oncologists that are burdened by the irrational feelings of all parties depressive symptoms creating a vicious cycle Effective treatment for dual disorders requires an integrated approach that addresses both the mental health condition and substance use simultaneously This often involves a combination of psychotherapy medication and support groups tailored to meet the specific needs of the individual It s important to recognize that treating one disorder without addressing the other often leads to poor outcomes as the untreated condition can trigger a relapse in the other Understanding and addressing dual disorder is crucial for improving the quality of life for affected individuals

SOCIAL AND SPIRITUAL DANCING IN CANCER Vera Eikon, 2013-01-15 The presence of cancer cells that is now called a disease does not just grow overnight Chemotherapy alone cannot cure the disease either my mother believed these too She once pacified a stage 4 breast cancer diagnosis and defied the odds as her disease went into remission A strength based model specifically the psychological process of family resilience became a guiding framework as I and my mother chose to take a positive stance in the midst of a threatening situation In addition to recognizing family strengths and resources this book also focuses on the significance of positive relationships within the community The interplay of resilient characteristics is highlighted while at the same time recognizing actual and real challenges that come along with a cancer experience the silent struggles toward social issues that all had an impact in my mother's disease Yet cancer can be a gateway to heal and to evolve one's consciousness in the process It is a consciousness that is inherent to each but is usually dormant and unrecognized This can allow both the person with cancer and other family members be positively transformed by the illness an opportunity and gift of cancer In this book I do not speak as an expert but as an observer of my own life and my environment as I attempt to document my mother's cancer experience The time I became her immediate caregiver during initial cancer treatments and until she was re-integrating into the community as a woman diagnosed with cancer Vera Icon A blend of scholarly research spirituality and personal experience shapes this memoir of growth and loss when coping with cancer A poignant mother daughter story that adds a personal touch to the science of suffering Kirkus Review November 30 2012
