I Always Wore My Topi:

Tropical Toolbox Jacopo Galli, 2022-03-24 Edwin Maxwell Fry and Jane Drew are two key figures of British architecture in the second half of the twentieth century their most important work was the book Tropical Architecture in the Dry and Humid Zones a manual compiled from the experience acquired in Ghana and Nigeria between 1949 and 1960 The manual is the formalisation of a design method specific for tropical areas the search for a renewed rooting of modern architecture not based on formal research or the revival of folkloric themes but on the close relationship between environmental support and anthropic intervention The design method has its roots in African colonial history and was the result of a long process of adaptation of Western modernist ideas to the extreme climatic conditions of the African continent A cosmopolitan localism based on the application of science in humanistic terms and capable of combining global and local dimensions was translated into an approach that respected the deep roots of tradition while providing innovation in terms of architectural solutions

Finding Oneself in the Other G. A. Cohen, 2012-10-28 This is the second of three volumes of posthumously collected writings of G A Cohen who was one of the leading and most progressive figures in contemporary political philosophy This volume brings together some of Cohen s most personal philosophical and nonphilosophical essays many of them previously unpublished Rich in first person narration insight and humor these pieces vividly demonstrate why Thomas Nagel described Cohen as a wonderful raconteur The nonphilosophical highlight of the book is Cohen s remarkable account of his first trip to India which includes unforgettable vignettes of encounters with strangers and reflections on poverty and begging Other biographical pieces include his valedictory lecture at Oxford in which he describes his philosophical development and offers his impressions of other philosophers and Isaiah s Marx and Mine a tribute to his mentor Isaiah Berlin Other essays address such topics as the truth in small c conservatism who can and can t condemn terrorists and the essence of bullshit A recurring theme is finding completion in relation to the world of other human beings Engaging perceptive and empathetic these writings reveal a more personal side of one of the most influential philosophers of our time *Catalog of Copyright Entries. Copyright Office, 1976 Anti-racism in Education Geetha Marcus, Stefanie Van de Peer, 2025-02-28 A powerful book comprising stories of anti racist action by higher education scholars including researchers and teachers at various stages of their careers Aimed at and relevant for anyone in education it encourages reflection on the tolerance of racist structures and strategies to help enact positive change An edited volume each chapter discusses the author s experiences of racism including how they became part of anti racist teaching activism through a growing understanding of the impact of racism in education Common themes are highlighted throughout so readers can engage with relevant ideas and issues to draw inspiration for their own anti racist action The book draws attention to the idea that while discussion is welcome it should be a pre cursor to focused action It shows exactly how university lecturers teachers and anyone involved in education can contribute in a meaningful way to the change that is needed To promote critical thinking

In the Land of the Lion and Sun, Or: Modern Persia Charles J. Wills, 1893 Two Taproots Marguerite Thoburn Watkins, 2004-10-22 Marguerite Thoburn Watkins memoir Two Taproots Growing Up in the Forties in India and America begins as the USA enters World War II and her missionary family the Thoburns is evacuated from India to America It covers the next ten years of the authors life Three peripatetic years in New England with their wartime scrap drives rationing and victory gardens culminated in a precipitous return to India while the war was still on The departure was secret because Loose lips sink ships She is back in India for Indian independence the partition riots and the assassination of Gandhi But the story is primarily personal family friends boarding school life experiences and impressions of growing up in two worlds It is about formative years shaped by World War II the last days of the British Raj Indian independence and by missionary life The author was a professors kid on an Indian college campus and an American girl at boarding school in the Himalayas Nourished as she says by English khana and Hindustani gana by a rich stew of cultures and religions and by the natural beauty of her homes she describes herself as having two taproots India and America But she was also part of a third experience that was nourished by both countries a third culture kid She conveys the privilege and challenge of such a life discovering as do many expatriate children that her country of citizenship seemed sometimes more foreign than the land in which she was born and that she is both at home and a stranger in either world The authors great love for India is apparent As a writer she says I can put myself back into a picture and am surrounded by the sounds smells people names I thought I had forgotten Like shifting color chips in a kaleidoscope forgotten patterns regroup and are mine again for a moment The ongoing struggle for self rule was a feature of her landscape in both Jabalpur and Mussoorie obstacle after obstacle marches arrests When independence finally arrived it came with a joyous rush but it came with partition and the bloody partition rioting The author writes Suddenly we too were involved and the Landour Muslims were in harms way One particular night

toward the end of August students heard shouts and screams from the hillside across the valley a sobering experience Partition rioting had started in Mussoorie Standing on the balcony in the afternoons looking toward the Landour bazaar girls watched the rioting far across the valley We had a panoramic view of the Mullingar army headquarters on the ridge and below it the settlement of Muslim homes We observed ant like figures climb toward the safety of the Mullingar enclosure To our horror columns of smoke rose from burning homes The flames from one large house lit the sky Yet there was an eerie unreality to the scene it was all so far away We could see the destruction but it was too far to hear very much And too we now had no news from the outside world and little sense of how widespread and bloodthirsty the riots had become Finally it was time for the author to sail back to America to attend Bates College in Maine It was the end of her childhood The memoir closes as a new decade begins New Years Day 1950 It was the start of her next incarnation life at home in her country of citizenship I snuggled in longing for my cat and looked out the window at the snow and stars In a few hours it would be New Years Day 1950 I wondered what the new decade would bring me And I thought about my two lives the unknown one ahead in this home country that was not really home where I felt like an outsider and the one behind me in the country I loved where I really was an outsider but did not feel like one I had friends at college and family here who loved me but did not understand me I thought about Through a Woman's I Patricia K.
