High School Life, 1920 How Policies Make Citizens Andrea Louise Campbell, 2011-10-16 Some groups participate in politics more than others Why And does it matter for policy outcomes In this richly detailed and fluidly written book Andrea Campbell argues that democratic participation and public policy powerfully reinforce each other Through a case study of senior citizens in the United States and their political activity around Social Security she shows how highly participatory groups get their policy preferences fulfilled and how public policy itself helps create political inequality Using a wealth of unique survey and historical data Campbell shows how the development of Social Security helped transform seniors from the most beleaguered to the most politically active age group Thus empowered seniors actively defend their programs from proposed threats shaping policy outcomes The participatory effects are strongest for low income seniors who are most dependent on Social Security The program thus reduces political inequality within the senior population a laudable effect while increasing inequality between seniors and younger citizens A brief look across policies shows that program effects are not always positive Welfare recipients are even less participatory than their modest socioeconomic backgrounds would imply because of the demeaning and disenfranchising process of proving eligibility Campbell concludes that program design profoundly shapes the nature of democratic citizenship And proposed policies such as Social Security privatization must be evaluated for both their economic and political effects because the very quality of democratic government is influenced by the kinds of policies it chooses A Big Gospel in Small Places Stephen Witmer, 2019-11-05 Christian ministries increasingly prioritize urban areas big cities and suburbs are considered more strategic more influential and more desirable places to live and work As a ministry strategy focusing on big places makes sense But the gospel of Jesus is often unstrategic
