Hunting And Gathering In The Corporate Tribe:

Hunting and Gathering in the Corporate Tribe Keith D. Wilcock, 2004 Behind the oak paneled boardrooms and underneath the pin striped suits lurk the same organizational principles that ruled the very first social group the tribe This book is an evolutionary look at the modern corporation and how its structure roles pecking orders and practices correspond to those of ancient tribal societies You can forget about the academics of management the ivory tower of wisdom of conventional M B A s Hunting and Gathering shows what it s really like who are the chieftains the hunters the gatherers Power symbols rituals and initiation rites are used every bit as much as they were in the past This book helps us understand which buttons are being pushed and why It s a whole new way to look at big business The Corporate Tribe Keith D. How War Began Keith F. Otterbein, 2004 Have humans always fought and killed each other or did they peacefully coexist until organized states developed Is war an expression of human nature or an artifact of civilization Questions about the origins and inherent motivations of warfare have long engaged philosophers ethicists and anthropologists as they speculate on the nature of human existence In How War Began author Keith F. Otterbein draws on primate behavior research archaeological research and data gathered from the Human Relations Area Files to argue for two separate origins He identifies two types of military organization one that developed two million years ago at the dawn of humankind wherever groups of hunters met and a second that developed some five thousand years ago in four identifiable regions when the first states arose and proceeded to embark upon military conquests In careful detail Otterbein marshals evidence for his case that warfare was possible and likely among early Homo sapiens He argues from comparison with other primates from Paleolithic rock art depicting wounded humans and from rare skeletal remains embedded with weapon points to conclude that warfare existed and reached a peak in big game hunting societies As the big game disappeared so did warfare only to reemerge once agricultural societies achieved a degree of political complexity that allowed the development of professional military organizations Otterbein concludes his survey with an analysis of how despotism in both ancient and modern states spawns warfare A definitive resource for anthropologists social scientists and historians How War Began is written for all who are interested in warfare whether they be military buffs or those seeking to understand the past and the present of humankind Publisher *Wenatchee National Forest (N.F.), Mt. Forests and Food Bhaskar Vira, Christoph Wildburger, Stephanie Mansourian, 2015-11-15 As population estimates for 2050 reach over 9 billion issues of food security and nutrition have been dominating academic and policy debates A total of 805 million people are undernourished worldwide and malnutrition affects nearly every country on the planet Despite impressive productivity increases there is growing evidence that conventional agricultural strategies fall short of eliminating global hunger as well as having long term ecological consequences Forests can play an important role in complementing agricultural production to address the Sustainable Development Goals on zero hunger Forests and trees can be managed to provide better and more nutritionally balanced diets greater control over food inputs particularly during lean seasons and periods of vulnerability especially for marginalised groups and deliver ecosystem services for crop production However forests are undergoing a rapid process of degradation a complex process that governments are struggling to reverse This volume provides important evidence and insights about the potential of forests to reducing global hunger and malnutrition exploring the different roles of landscapes and the governance approaches that are required for the equitable delivery of these benefits Forests and Food is essential reading for researchers students NGOs and government departments responsible for agriculture forestry food security and poverty alleviation around the globe American Indian Reservations and Trust Areas Veronica E.
