

'Frequently out of mind, now sadly out of sight, the two-headed monster that was the Models enlivened the '80s with an edgy, imaginative sound that, like Freud himself, was uniquely attuned to its time.' — Glenn A Baker

It was Melbourne, early eighties, and out of the sharpie haircuts and desert boots of Blackburn South emerged one of Australia's most memorable pop stars – James Freud. With a one-way ticket to fame and fortune, James scaled the magical mystery musical mountain, finding early success as a solo artist then later as a member of the Models.

For ten years he lived the rock'n'roll dream – touring, recording, drinking and drugging, and having up close and personals with everyone from Kylie to Chopper, Andy Warhol to Princess Diana.

But naivety and the ubiquitous belief he was indestructible took its toll, and before he knew it James found himself washed up, naked and bleeding, on the beach of semi-obscurity with only his past hits – 'Modern Girl', 'Barbados' and 'Out of Mind Out of Sight' – for company.

But with willpower, luck and a little help from his friends he clawed his way back to the real world....

I am the voice left from drinking is a candid memoir from an icon of Australian music's recent history, who, only a week after joining the ARIA Hall of Fame, was to lose his battle with the demon in the bottle.
