Experimental Learning In Action:

Experiential Learning in Action Philip Burnard, 1991-01-01 This book offers a detailed account of the findings of a major study of trainers and students' perceptions of experiential learning and experiential learning methods. It opens with an introduction to the study. It then offers a detailed review of the literature on experiential learning and adult learning theory. Following this, it describes the qualitative and quantitative research project in detail. Findings include acknowledgement of a theory-practice gap between what trainers teach and what students perceive as relevant and useful. The specific focus of this study is nursing education and training. The study also identifies two language styles used in the literature and by some of the trainers. The first mimics the slang of the 1960s and the second is similar to the language used by existential philosophers. It is suggested that these language styles form a barrier of cultural isogloss between trainers and students and this may interfere with learning.

Social and Emotional Learning in Action Tara Flippo, 2016-05-08 Social and Emotional Learning in Action SELA is an easy-to-use sourcebook facilitated by teaching and/or counseling practitioners primarily in school settings. The pedagogical basis for these lessons are shaped around the research findings of the Collaborative for Academic Social and Emotional Learning CASEL, indicating that the inclusion of social and emotional development programs positively affects academic achievement. CASEL has identified five interrelated cognitive, affective, and behavioral competencies: self-awareness, self-management, social awareness, relationship skills, and responsible decision-making. SELA will address all five. SELA will provide a developmentally sequenced, year-long modular flow or stand-alone lessons that integrate the benefits of experiential and social-emotional learning SEL into the classroom. Each lesson (36 total) will offer step-by-step instructions along with a materials list.
