Kellis Isocrates Codex Dakhleh Oasis Project Monograph:

The Kellis Isocrates Codex Isocrates, 1997 This volume of the Dakhleh Oasis Project presents a first edition of the texts of three orations by or attributed to Isocrates Ad Demonicum Ad Nicolem and the Nicocles as found in a new 4th century AD codex from Ismant el Kharab in the Dakhleh Oasis ancient Kellis Isocrates himself lived in the 4th century BC he was an Athenian orator who wrote many famous and influential speeches although he never delivered them in public which provide us with an extremely valuable commentary on the great political issues in the Greek world during the 4th century This codex is immensely exciting as it is the earliest text of Isocrates ever to have been found It was discovered lying in the sand on the floor of a house excavated in Kellis and consisted of nine wooden boards tied together with string inscribed in Greek on both sides of each board Members of the project believe that it was probably the copy of a local schoolmaster as the general quality of the handwriting and the spelling errors make it unlikely that it was owned by a refined scholar Moreover the orations contained in the codex were popular for school reading in antiquity This volume reproduces the text of the codex in full together with commentary on selected passages and discussion of the discovery date and purpose of the codex codicological observations and a tabular comparison of variant readings Thirty black and white photos of the codex allow us to get extremely close to this remarkable document and provide a good impression of its size texture construction and appearance

Kaper, Susanna McFadden, 2016-02-01 Scattered through the vast expanse of stone and sand that makes up Egypt's Western Desert are several oases These islands of green in the midst of the Sahara owe their existence to springs and wells drawing on ancient aquifers In antiquity as today they supported agricultural communities going back to Neolithic times but expanding greatly in the millennium from the Saite pharaohs to the Roman emperors New technologies of irrigation and transportation made the oases integral parts of an imperial economy Amheida ancient Trimithis was one of those oasis communities Located in the western part of the Dakhla Oasis it was an important regional center reaching a peak in the Roman period before being abandoned Over the past decade excavations at this well preserved site have revealed its urban layout and brought to light houses streets a bath a school and a church The only standing brick pyramid of the Roman period in Egypt has been restored Wall paintings temple reliefs pottery and texts all contribute to give a lively sense of its political religious economic and cultural life This book presents these aspects of the city's existence and its close ties to the Nile valley by way of long desert roads in an accessible and richly illustrated fashion

The Excavations at Mut al-Kharab II Richard J. Long, 2021-12-03 For over a century our knowledge of Egypt's Western Desert during the Third Intermediate Period relied almost entirely on the Greater and Smaller Dakhleh Stelae. These two significant documents were purchased by Henry Lyons in 1894 in Dakhleh Oasis and indicated the existence of a substantial temple at Mut al Kharab dedicated to the god Seth. Apart from these sources very little information from the Western Desert could be dated to this period. Excavations at Mut al Kharab began in 2000 and in recent years evidence from the Third Intermediate Period temple has grown considerably. A range of artefacts has been unearthed including decorated temple blocks, stelae, ostraka in situ, architectural remains, other small finds and a large collection of well dated ceramics. The scale of evidence suggests Mut al Kharab was probably the most significant Third Intermediate Period site in the Western Desert. In light of this new material a re-examination of activity in the Western Desert during this period has been possible. This volume presents all the available evidence relating to the western oases during the Third Intermediate Period with a particular focus on the ceramics. Occupation appears to have been more widespread than the limited evidence previously suggested and these oasis communities were closely connected to the populations in the Nile Valley. The Egyptian central administration continued to be interested in the Western Desert although political control does not seem to have been consistent. Moreover, subtle yet distinct variations in the material record including aspects of pottery traditions and religious practices may reveal the existence of an oasis culture. As such we are developing a much clearer picture of activity in this region.

Sixty-five Papyrological Texts F. A. J. Hoogendijk, Brian Paul Muhs, 2008 This volume contains editions of sixty-five Greek, Demotic, Coptic and Arabic texts from Egypt contributed as a token of friendship and respect by forty-six of Klaas Worpa's colleagues and co-authors upon his retirement from the Papyrological Institute of the University of Leiden in August 2008. The contents are as diverse as Klaas Worpa's own wide range of interests and provide a vivid impression of life and culture in Graeco-Roman Egypt. The texts are written on papyrus, potsherds, parchment, paper and wood. They include both literary and documentary papyri and ostraca and date from the third century BC to the eleventh century AD. They are published fully for the first time with transcriptions and translations and are accompanied by photographs.

The Kellis Agricultural Account Book Roger S. Bagnall, 1997 The report from Kellis by the Dakhleh Oasis team documents a collection of wooden tablets found alongside the Isocrates codex. The tablets contain the most extensive and well-preserved set of accounts for an agricultural entity to survive from the 4th century AD. The accounts probably date from the 360s and document the daily life of an agricultural estate over a period of five years. Information on crops, measures, prices and valuation, tenants and religious institutions can be gleaned from the account book which is here transcribed in full with a facing page translation and line by line commentary on the text. There is also discussion of the significance of the accounts and the context in which the tablets were found.

Checklist of Editions of Greek, Latin, Demotic, and Coptic Papyri, Ostraca, and Tablets John F. Oates, 2001 The primary purpose of the Checklist is to provide for scholars and librarians a ready bibliography of all monographic volumes both current and out of print of Greek Latin Demotic and Coptic texts on papyrus parchment ostraca or wood tablets A secondary purpose of the original checklist first published in 1974 was to establish a standard list of abbreviations for editions of Greek texts Now this has been largely achieved this edition aims to expand standardized abbreviations to cover Coptic and Demotic material In general this volume offers more complete coverage of Demotic material than ever attempted before it is especially valuable since this is a growing area of study that lacks bibliographic resources and standard notations
