

Process safety leadership – what have we learnt?

When considering process safety incidents, including many of the most high profile safety occurrences, it is clear that leadership failures are a significant causal factor in a proportion of incidents or events. Therefore, an active and continuous focus on leadership is essential to ensure that risks are not only properly managed but also understood.

Following the Sabenaair Express and Total UKG11 incidents, both events saw the CCO/Operational Authority (O/A) establish the Process Safety Leadership Group (PLSL) to carry out a range of activities, develop, progress and implement strategies, effective measures and practices that improve safety. In 2008, the PLSL continued to progress Process Safety Leadership, which are aimed at providing the foundation to ensure high reliability organisations. These projects progress the active industry system to follow and include leadership, active engagement and commitment to safety, management engagement and involvement in the activities of managing safety, as well as ensuring best practice across industry sectors and learning and implementing lessons from research incidents in other organisations in order to transfer the knowledge and experience.

These projects have also been actively adopted across the domestic and international oil industry. Furthermore, the CCO/Operational Authority in the UK has developed an operational delivery guide based on the principles, which is used to carry out the various interventions.

What is Major Hazard Leadership and why is it so important?

High standards of leadership are essential to ensure effective control of major hazard risks. This is essential to understand the implications of business decisions on major hazard management. Both in the short term and in the long term, we should not be able to represent any of the principles developed by the PLSL. Good Major Hazard Leadership helps organisations to ensure that risks are given the resource, priority and attention required to ensure the delivery of a high standard. It is also about the sustained management of safety in the context of the business. Leaders should understand what can go wrong that could cause a major incident, but also what systems are in place to reduce the likelihood of this happening and have a clear and simple understanding of the overall risk profile of the systems and working effectively.

Leadership intervention

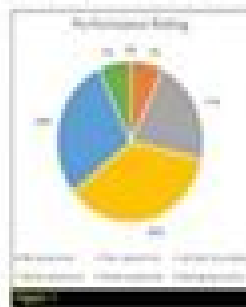

The Joint Storage Association is a leading member of the UK Oilfield Storage Forum, a high level joint industry working group established in 2010 to improve major incident risk and leadership management within water infrastructure across the industry.

In 2013, the CCO/Operational Authority awarded the 'Year of Major Hazard Leadership'. To coincide with this, the industry adopted the CCO/Operational Authority (O/A) published by Operations Delivery Board, 'Improving Major Hazard Leadership and Managing Leadership Failure in Major Incidents and the Supporting Major Hazard Leadership Intervention Plan'. The Operations Delivery Board is part of the CCO/Operational Authority and is a strategic steering group aimed at encouraging strong leadership and preventing major incidents. It undertakes the day to day programme for ensuring effective leadership in preventing, reducing and mitigating major incidents and issues the background and management for mitigation and investigation of incidents. The separate Major Hazard Leadership Intervention Plan provides the principles to use when engaging with senior leaders.

Importantly, UK partners began in 2017. The objective of the CCO/Operational Authority is to ensure that leadership intervention is to lead to ensure that the system and process safety compliance are demonstrated at all times within the business. The effectiveness of this will be evidenced and measured over time. It has been agreed that in addition, Major Hazard Leadership intervention is aimed at ensuring that there is effective communication, a robust management of change, credible in place and that the integrity of the system is maintained and not compromised. The intervention plan intervention system is to ensure that the business is a leading organisation, in that it gets effective arrangements in place to deal with and work with new science and knowledge with existing understanding from the business – and process safety performance, compliance and credibility, senior leaders.

A good CCO/Operational Authority version of the Major Hazard Leadership intervention is to ensure that the performance, safety compliance in the Operations Delivery Board. However, the leadership failure to follow the intervention plan the role leads to the consequences of the process safety leadership intervention and it is clear that the intervention plan the role leads to the consequences of the process safety leadership intervention.

At the time of writing, operators that have been subjected to an intervention have achieved the scores shown in Figure 1.

How Does it Feel? Charlotte Bosseaux, 2007 Narratology is concerned with the study of narratives but surprisingly it does not usually distinguish between original and translated texts This lack of distinction is regrettable In recent years the visibility of translations and translators has become a widely discussed topic in Translation Studies yet the issue of translating a novel's point of view has remained relatively unexplored It seems crucial to ask how far a translator's choices affect the novel's point of view and whether characters or narrators come across similarly in originals and translations This book addresses exactly these questions It proposes a method by which it becomes possible to investigate how the point of view of a work of fiction is created in an original and adapted in translation It shows that there are potential problems involved in the translation of linguistic features that constitute point of view deixis modality transitivity and free indirect discourse and that this has an impact on the way works are translated Traditionally comparative analysis of originals and their translations have relied on manual examinations this book demonstrates that corpus based tools can greatly facilitate and sharpen the process of comparison The method is demonstrated using Virginia Woolf's To The Lighthouse 1927 and The Waves 1931 and their French translations

Personal Process in Child-Centred Play Therapy David Le Vay, Elise Cuschieri, 2022-09-02

Personal Process in Child Centred Play Therapy provides a very specific exploration of the play therapy process from the personal perspective of the play therapist This volume examines the personal challenges opportunities losses and gains and numerous obstacles that one has to negotiate through the course of both training to become a play therapist and working as a qualified clinician with children who have complex life difficulties The book aims to offer a forum within which the role function and process of the personal within play therapy can be explored Bringing together a number of experienced play therapists the book shares often deeply personal accounts of their experience of training and clinical practice Chapters challenge the unspoken therapist taboos of shame childhood trauma vulnerability and grief shining a light on the more hidden areas of therapist experience Clinical issues around the unconscious process are also explored but once again from the personal position of the play therapist rather than the child With a unique and distinct perspective on the therapeutic process this book is specifically intended for both trainee and experienced play therapists but will be relevant to all psychotherapists involved in working therapeutically with children and young people
