Human Tumours in Short Term Culture P. P. Dendy, 1976 Journal of the National Cancer Institute, 2013

Placenta Peter Beaconsfield, Claude Villee, 2013-10-22 Placenta A Neglected Experimental Animal covers the proceedings of the 1978 round table discussion on placenta held at Bedford College University of London under the auspices of the Special Commission on Internal Pollution. The placenta's remarkably complete spectrum of cellular and biochemical activity as well as its hormonal and endocrinological roles and its short life cycle adds to its suitability for studying the processes of cell replication, immune mechanisms, graft acceptance and rejection, and aging. This book is organized into four sections encompassing 19 chapters. Section I emphasizes the process of placental metabolism. This section particularly deals with the principles of metabolic regulation: carbohydrate, fat, and protein metabolism; placenta's endocrine functions; and in vitro and in vivo studies of placental metabolism. Section II highlights the placenta's potential to delineate cell replication processes. This section describes the origin and formation of placenta and the mechanism of carcinogenesis. Section III focuses on the relevance of placenta and its potential as a model for studying malignancy, while Section IV examines its potential as a model for organ aging. This book will be of value to cell and developmental biologists, immunologists, and oncologists.

Human Cancer in Primary Culture, A Handbook John Masters, 2012-12-06 Growing human cancer cells in primary culture requires patience, intuition, care, and experience. This is one of the few areas where the wrinkled senior scientist can be more productive than the bright young post doc. There are few mechanical aids, no automated procedures, and kits are unheard of. There is no right way to do it, and every tumour is different. But this book will make it easier. Chapter 1 on characterization is essential reading. Much published work is useless because of the failure to take two simple steps to characterise the cells. The first step is to fully record all the clinical data; the absence of this information can render the work valueless. The second step is to confirm the origin of the tissue to exclude cross contamination. The wastage of years of work can be avoided with the use of a simple DNA preparation with a couple of commercially available probes. Chapter 2 describes the development of serum free media. This is a goal many would like to achieve, particularly if someone else does it, as it is laborious and empirical. Defined serum free medium is essential for studies of growth factors and has major advantages in the commercial preparation of cell products and other applications.

Chemotherapy Kurt Hellmann, 2012-12-06 The International Society of Chemotherapy meets every two years to review progress in chemotherapy of infections and of malignant disease. Each meeting gets larger to encompass the extension of chemotherapy into new areas. In some instances, expansion has been rapid, for example in cephalosporins, penicillins, and combination chemotherapy of cancer; in others, slow, as in the field of parasitology. New problems of resistance and untoward effects arise; reduction of host toxicity without loss of antitumour activity by new substances occupies wide attention. The improved results with cancer chemotherapy, especially in leukaemias, are leading to a greater prevalence of severe infection in patients so treated; pharmacokinetics of drugs in normal and diseased subjects is receiving increasing attention along with related problems of bioavailability and interactions between drugs Meanwhile the attack on some of the major bacterial infections such as gonorrhoea and tuberculosis which were among the first infections to feel the impact of chemotherapy still continue to be major world problems and are now under attack with new agents and new methods From this wide field and the 1 000 papers read at the Congress we have produced Proceedings which reflect the variety and vigour of research in this important field of medicine It was not possible to include all of the papers presented at the Congress but we have attempted to include most aspects of current progress in chemotherapy Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965-70

The British Journal of Cancer, 1984 Advances in Cellular Neurobiology Sergey Fedoroff, Leif Hertz, 2013-10-22 Advances in Cellular Neurobiology Volume 2 discusses the central nervous system focusing on the structure and function of the brain and spinal cord at cellular level and higher brain functions such as learning memory and intelligence This book is divided into three main sections cell differentiation and interaction aging and pathology and methodologies The topics discussed include APUD cells and paraneurons embryonic origin trophic and specifying factors directed to neuronal cells and cellular aspects of human brain tumors gliomas The astrocyte in liver disease radioenzymatic methods for analysis of neurotransmitters and application of immunofluorescence in studies of cytoskeletal antigens are also deliberated in this text This publication is intended for neurologists but is also beneficial to students researching on the topographical anatomy and functional relation of the brain and spinal cord Cancer Treatment Reports, 1986 Monograph National Cancer Institute (U.S.), 1978-12 Pathology of Bladder Cancer (1983) Bryan T George, Cohen M Samuel, 2017-11-22 Present classification schemes of bladder neoplasms are based on structural analyses of histologic material primarily at the light microscopic level Attempts to identify histologic variables of certain bladder lesions as biologic precursors of malignancy are in progress Efforts to relate functional attributes of altered bladder tissues to preneoplastic and neoplastic structural changes are in active development These advances do require a common recognition and communication of histologic patterns that are used as standard benchmarks This volume is offered to present in detail description of histologic characteristics of bladder cancer in humans and animals Areas of recent research advances that may extend our knowledge of the pathobiology of bladder cancer are emphasized Observations derived from experimental animals are related to the pathogenesis of bladder cancer in humans This book is intended for pathologists urologists oncologists radiation therapists epidemiologists environmental scientists toxicologists public health scientists and regulatory officials Culture of Human Tumor Cells Roswitha Pfragner, R. Medical BioMethods Handbook John M. Walker, Ralph Rapley, 2007-10-09 John Walker and Ralph Rapley have collected a wide ranging group of molecular and biochemical techniques that are the most frequently used in medical and clinical research especially diagnostics The authors well established investigators who run their own research programs and use the methods on a regular basis outline the practical procedures for using them and describe a variety of pertinent applications Among the technologies presented are southern and western blotting electrophoresis PCR cDNA and protein microarrays liquid chromatography in situ hybridization karyotyping flow cytometry bioinformatics genomics and ribotyping The applications include assays for mutation detection mRNA analysis chromosome translocations inborn errors of metabolism protein therapeutics and gene therapy

Methods In Animal Physiology Zdenek Deyl, 2019-08-08 The aim of the present volume was to give an overview over different available methodological approaches The specialists may perhaps object that in their particular field the level of information is superficial However let them look at other chapters in which different approaches are discussed and which surely will appear less superficial from the more general point of view We hope at least that crucial references can be traced throughout the book that would enable the readers to go in more detail when desired It can be traced throughout the book that would enable the readers to go in more detail when desired It was really one of our ideas to draw the survey of possibilities available If this can stimulate the readers to use ideas to draw the survey of possibilities available If this can stimulate the readers to use other methods that those they are routinely using the goals will be met

National Library of Medicine Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), Radiotherapy, Surgery, and Immunotherapy Frederick Becker, 2012-12-06 The history of the development of cancer therapy has been marked by a recurring pattern one of initially exciting and encouraging results as new methods were introduced followed by dismaying failures The extremity of the disease and its high mortality have dictated that each means of damaging tumor cells would be rapidly explored and exploited as a mode of therapy long before the correspond ing theory and technique were completely understood and perfected Thus radiation was used as an antitumor agent almost immediately following recogni tion of its cytodestructive capability Equally constant following the rapid utilization of new therapeutic methods has been a period of significant technical improvements This second aspect of the pattern is also illustrated by the field of radiotherapy New radiation sources new methods of dosimetry use of high energy radiation and other new techniques allowed the therapist to better focus upon the tumor and to improve the geometry of exposure Thus with each technical advance the reach of radiotherapy was increased and damage to normal tissues was decreased Inevitably however a limit was reached a point at which clinicians and researchers realized they could go no further without returning to a more fundamental search one based
