practitioners with a basic understanding of classical text retrieval methods. It offers guidelines and information on all aspects that need to be taken into consideration when building MLIR systems while avoiding too many hands-on details that could rapidly become obsolete. Thus it bridges the gap between the material covered by most of the classical IR textbooks and the novel requirements related to the acquisition and dissemination of information in whatever language it is stored.

Language and Representation in Information Retrieval David C. Blair, 1990. Information or Document Retrieval is the subject of this book. It is not an introductory book although it is self-contained in the sense that it is not necessary to have a background in the theory or practice of Information Retrieval in order to understand its arguments. The book presents as clearly as possible one particular perspective on Information Retrieval and attempts to say that certain aspects of the theory or practice of the management of documents are more important than others. The majority of Information Retrieval research has been aimed at the more experimentally tractable small-scale systems and although much of that work has added greatly to our understanding of Information Retrieval it is becoming increasingly apparent that retrieval systems with large data bases of documents are a fundamentally different genre of systems than small-scale systems. If this is so, which is the thesis of this book, then we must now study large information retrieval systems with the same rigor and intensity that we once studied small-scale systems. Hegel observed that the quantitative growth of any system caused qualitative changes to take place in its structure and processes. The Evaluation of Information Retrieval Systems Stephen C. Smithson, 1989. Advances in

Multilingual and Multimodal Information Retrieval Valentin Jijkoun, Thomas Mandl, Henning Müller, Douglas W. Oard, Vivien Petras, Diana Santos, 2008-09-26. The eighth campaign of the Cross Language Evaluation Forum CLEF for European languages was held from January to September 2007. There were seven distinct evaluation tracks in CLEF 2007 designed to test the performance of a wide range of multilingual information access systems or system components. CLEF is by now an established international evaluation initiative and in 2007 81 groups from all over the world submitted results for one or more of the different evaluation tracks. Full details regarding the design of the tracks, the methodologies used for evaluation and the results obtained by the participants can be found in the different sections of these proceedings. As always, the results of the campaign were reported and discussed at the annual workshop held in Budapest, Hungary, 19-21 September immediately following the eleventh European Conference on Digital Libraries. The workshop plays an important role by providing the opportunity for all the groups that have participated in the evaluation campaign to get together to compare approaches and exchange ideas. Multilingual Information Access for Text, Speech and Images
