AI cannot be satisfactorily implemented unless the phenomena of qualia and consciousness are first understood In this book an explanation of consciousness is presented one that rejects material and immaterial substances dualism panpsychism emergence and metaphysics What remains is obvious This explanation excludes consciousness in digital computers but allows the artificial creation of consciousness in one natural like way by associative non computational neural networks The proof of a theory calls for empirical verification In this case the proof could be in the form of a sentient robot This book describes a step towards this in the form of the author s small experimental robot XCR 1 This robot has evolved through the years and has now new cognitive abilities which are described
