Based on new field research this book assesses the current state of governance and public sector reforms in eleven Asian countries and jurisdictions especially in the wake of the recent regional financial crisis that seriously affected some of them. It analyses reform efforts comparatively against a backdrop of governance problems and seeks to establish whether these efforts represent a substantive shift in attitudes towards reform or whether they serve simply to reinforce existing practices. The authors explore a number of important themes that are central to governance and public sector reform issues. These include the role of the state, the success or failure of organizational reforms, corruption, the applicability of the new public management model in the Asian context and the governance values and reform models promoted by regional and international agencies.

East Asian Economic Issues Jon D. Kendall, 1998. This book is a compilation of joint papers written by the staff and students of the Nanyang Business School in Singapore. It encompasses a broad range of interesting microeconomic and macroeconomic topics. The four sections of the book cover Singaporean microeconomic and macroeconomic issues, interdependence among Asia Pacific economies and other Asia Pacific economic issues. The book embodies the highest level of technical rigor and commitment to excellence. The general public should find this book a handy, useful and informative tool for understanding the economics of East Asia. In particular, analysts and researchers in banks, securities houses, multinational corporations, government ministries and agencies and universities will find the book indispensable for enhancing their understanding of the region's economies.

Southeast Asia Chong-Yah Lim, 2001. This is an important and up-to-date, including a chapter on the Asian financial crisis and recovery, book by a most pre-eminent economist who does not only have a distinguished academic career but also actual policy involvement at a high level. The book mixes accurate description with interesting theoretical analysis, notably the author's theories of EGOIN, Triple C and the S Curve, and sensible policy recommendations. Professor Yew Kwang Ng, Professor of Economics, Department of Economics, Monash University, Melbourne, Australia. This is an important study of the economies of South East Asia. Professor Lim draws upon many years of research and experience to make comparisons between countries and to track changes over time. His title reflects his optimism but also his caution. Much has been done. Much remains to be done. There is a long road ahead before the countries of South East Asia can look back on their achievements and say that they are fully developed at last. Professor David Reisman, Visiting Professor of Economics, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. This book provides a comprehensive analysis of Southeast Asia's economic progress and prospects. Written by one of the region's most distinguished development economists, the book will be welcomed by graduate students and researchers and by policy makers in the region, all of whom will learn much from this authoritative and insightful volume. Professor Colin Kirkpatrick, Professor of Economics and Director, Institute for Development Policy and Management, The University of Manchester, Manchester, United Kingdom. There are very few economists in Southeast Asia today who can write authoritatively about Southeast Asian economies and Professor Lim is prominently one among these few. The book leads the readers through more than 40 years of postwar development to the present day where many of these Southeast Asian nations are recovering from the recent devastating economic crisis Professor Lim's insights into the economic history and development of countries in Southeast Asia make the readers feel comfortable to go through the book quickly After finishing it most of us should feel confident that Southeast Asia is still a unique region and despite the current economic crisis there is still great economic future for Southeast Asians Dr Medhi Krongkaew Professor of Economics and Director Institute of East Asian Studies Thammasat University Bangkok Thailand Southeast Asia has gone a long way to what it has become today It has yet to travel another long road ahead to becoming an economically developed region The author has successfully described the region's milestones and obstacles both in looking back and in looking into the future It also offers a useful theoretical construct to prescribe and predict Southeast Asia's development process The book is to date the most comprehensive treatment of Southeast Asia as an economic region It is even more valuable as it is written by an insider to the region and its development problems This is the textbook the region has been waiting for In fact it is a book for every interested person to read Dr Hadi Soesastro Executive Director Centre for Strategic and International Studies CSIS Jakarta Indonesia it is very well written and thoroughly researched The volume clearly achieves the author's stated intention of providing a useful book to both graduate and undergraduate students whose academic foci is on Southeast Asia and to policy makers and others who are interested in policy options in the ten ASEAN countries this reviewer recommends the book enthusiastically and without reservation

S. Jomo, 2013-04-03 This important collection is a timely contribution to the debate on the Asian financial crisis With chapters written by well established international experts in Asian economics this book constitutes a finely judged example of the varying opinions on the matter      Institutions, Macroeconomics, And The Global Economy Rafael Di Tella, Huw R Pill, Ingrid Vogel, 2005-09-05 All managers face a business environment where international and macroeconomic phenomena matter Understanding the genesis of financial and currency crises stock market booms and busts and social and labor unrest is a crucial aspect in making informed managerial decisions Adverse macroeconomic phenomena can have a catastrophic impact on firm performance witness the strong companies destroyed by the Mexican tequila crisis Yet at the same time such episodes also create business opportunities and not just for the hedge funds and speculators that profit from them Managers that have and use a coherent framework for analyzing these phenomena will enjoy a competitive advantage This book presents a series of case studies taught in the Harvard Business School course Institutions Macroeconomics and the Global Economy The course addresses the opportunities created by the emergence of a global economy and proposes strategies for managing the risks that globalization entails The Far East and Australasia 2003 Europa Publications,2002 A unique survey of each country in the region It includes an extensive collection of facts statistics analysis and directory information in one accessible volume Labour and Social Trends in Asia and the Pacific 2005 ,2005

Tongzon,2005 Institutional Change in Southeast Asia examines the institutional changes taking place in and challenges facing the region since 1997 The book focuses on determinants to the adjustments and on implementations of the reforms It also describes various differences in the reform process between countries in the region Southeast Asia's economic development over the last decades has been impressive Most of the region achieved consistently high growth rates accompanied by significant structural transformation and industrialization poverty alleviation and improvements in their overall standard of living as indicated by such social indicators as greater longevity more widespread delivery of basic education and lower infant mortality rates However the crisis that struck Southeast Asia in 1997 had severe economic social and political consequences in the region It also threw into doubt the future economic prosperity of the countries in Southeast Asia and raised intriguing questions about the quality of their institutions and their approach to economic development Sjöholm and Tongzon argue that the economies of Southeast Asia need to reform their institutions if the previous rapid development is to continue The institutional weaknesses have been addressed to different degrees and with different success in the affected countries Against the backdrop of Southeast Asia's importance in the world economy it is hardly possible to overestimate the need to understand this process of change

Industrial Transformation in the Developing World Michael T. Rock,David P. Angel,2005-10-06 Grow first clean up later environmental strategies in the developing economies of East Asia China Korea and Taiwan in Northeast Asia and Indonesia Malaysia the Philippines Singapore Thailand and Vietnam in Southeast Asia pose a critical regional and global sustainability challenge in this area of continuing rapid urban based industrial growth It is the most polluted region in the world Whilst being at the leading edge of the processes of urbanization industrialization and globalization these economies are in the midst not at the end of their urban industrial transformations During the next 25 years urban populations in the region are expected roughly to double and most of the industrial capital stock that will be on the ground by 2030 has not yet been built. Given East Asia's growing size in the world's economy and ecology and its increasingly polluted environment, this looming urban industrial transformation is both a challenge and an opportunity. Unless steps are taken now to make this transformation more sustainable, East Asia's and the world's environmental future is likely to deteriorate seriously. Using detailed case studies and rigorous empirical analyses, Rock and Angel, leading experts in this field, show that East Asian governments have found institutionally unique ways to overcome the sustainability challenge. As a result of these findings, they demonstrate how even low income economies in the rest of the world can use regulatory policies, industrial policies, and an openness to trade and foreign investment that will increase the competitiveness of their firms whilst improving their environmental performance, thus proving an important antidote to those who argue that poor countries cannot afford to clean up their environment whilst their economies remain under developed. Economic and Social Survey of Asia and the Pacific

Globalization and Networked Societies Yue-man Yeung, 2000-07-01 The world in the last two decades of the twentieth century fundamentally and radically changed at a speed and on a scale never before witnessed. The challenge posed at the beginning of the third millennium is enormous for governments and people the world over. Globalization along with globalism continues its unrelenting and accelerating march as it draws more countries, cities and people closer into interdependent relationships. Globalization and Networked Societies attempts to tease out some of the salient elements of this process, especially as it has affected urban centers in Pacific Asia over the past twenty years. Globalization and rapid economic growth have transformed the region and its cities on varied spatial scales, bringing new opportunities and challenges for governments, the private sector and individuals. All countries in Pacific Asia are covered in this work, with special attention given to Hong Kong and to China, a late bloomer in the Asia scene but nevertheless one that has experienced phenomenal growth and accelerated globalization in recent decades. The empirical analyses reveal the outcome dilemmas and meanings of globalization in the urban regional scene.

South Asian Economic Development Moazzem Hossain, Rajat Kathuria, Iyanatul Islam, 2010 This new edition provides an up to date guide to the growing markets in South Asia. It offers an analysis of the changes and consequences of high sustainable growth of the region and provides an outlook as to where these economies are heading in the future. Focusing on the region's economic performance and achievements in the economic development front, the textbook will be of great interest to students and researchers in development economics, business economics, development studies and Asian studies.

Southeast Asia Lim Chong Yah, 2001-04-30 Latest Edition Southeast Asia: The Long Road Ahead 3rd Edition Southeast Asia is going through tremendous changes economically. The market oriented economies of Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand have been showing robust growth since the 1960s. The transitional economies of Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar and Vietnam are exhibiting signs of economic awakening and revival after years of internal political and social turmoil Despite these encouraging signs the region still has a long road ahead in its efforts to achieve developed nation status This book is a serious and concise study of various important economic aspects of Southeast Asia The existing economic studies of the region are mainly topical in nature Most books attempt to offer only a partial treatment of the issues and fail to examine these issues in a holistic manner The objective of this book is to provide a more complete cross country discussion on the economic issues and problems facing Southeast Asia Besides critically examining the multiple facets of changes and problems that have been and will be encountered by Southeast Asia the book presents a lucid exposition of the prospects of the region However it does not stop there but moves on to provide pointers and suggestions on how Southeast Asian countries should proceed with their development options and processes The book should be of interest to economists and graduate students researching on Southeast Asia It will also be extremely useful to those who want to have a better understanding of the Southeast Asian region
