Melling, 1990-01 FICTION GENERAL Postclassicisms The Postclassicisms Collective, 2019-12-27 Made up of nine prominent scholars The Postclassicisms Collective aims to map a space for theorizing and reflecting on the values attributed to antiquity The product of these reflections Postclassicisms takes up a set of questions about what it means to know and care about Greco Roman antiquity in our turbulent world and offers suggestions for a discipline in transformation as new communities are being built around the study of the ancient Greco Roman world Structured around three primary concepts value time and responsibility and nine additional concepts Postclassicisms asks scholars to reflect upon why they choose to work in classics to examine how proximity to and distance from antiquity has been and continues to be figured and to consider what they seek to accomplish within their own scholarly practices Together the authors argue that a stronger critical self awareness an enhanced sense of the intellectual history of the methods of classics and a greater understanding of the ethical and political implications of the decisions that the discipline makes will lead to a more engaged intellectual life both for classicists and ultimately for society A timely intervention into the present and future of the discipline Postclassicisms will be required reading for professional classicists and students alike and a model for collaborative disciplinary intervention by scholars in other fields Supreme Court , Vulnerability in Scandinavian Art and
