from stress-related disorders via internet-based interventions Robert Persson Asplund, 2021-01-18 Stress has become one of the major challenges of modern society especially within the working population causing significant costs and personal problems However the range of prevention and treatment is not at all proportionate to the needs of the public Internet provides new options for broad dissemination and a growing body of evidence suggest that internet based interventions for stress could be effective However few studies have examined the efficacy in clinical samples or how participants experience these new treatment delivery formats Further only a limited number of studies have evaluated the efficacy of work focused stress interventions on work related outcomes e g absenteeism and if recovery has the potential in stress prevention In the present thesis internet based cognitive behavioural stress interventions iCBT designed to reduce symptoms of stress and increase recovery and work participation among 117 managers and 260 employees were evaluated in three randomized controlled trials Study I III and IV and a qualitative study Study II Results of Study I and III indicate that the iCBT for managers and employees with stress related disorders was effective in reducing symptoms of chronic stress In Study III effects on work related outcomes e.g work ability and absenteeism were only seen in the work focused iCBT In Study II participants found the work focused iCBT to be accessible and feasible and reported positive experiences on stress and well being in both life and at work Finally preliminary results in Study IV suggest that recovery experiences an important protective factor against chronic stress could be improved by a brief internet based recovery intervention In conclusion if implemented these relatively brief and accessible interventions could be a feasible way to increase access to treatment and learning distressed employees and others how to prevent and recover from stress related disorders
