migratory shorebirds in Central Asian Flyway CAF The CAF covers thirty countries of which India is one of the dominant wintering grounds for shorebirds 2 Shorebirds can be regarded as global sentinels of environmental changes due to their migratory ecology and habitat use patterns For long distant migrants the ecological quality of wintering ground appears to be of key importance The West Coast of India faces environmental threats due to anthropogenic activities Habitat destruction solid waste dumping sand mining and so on are subjected to scientific study in KVCR The role of man made infrastructures in near the habitat like roads bridges mobile towers etc were also subjected to study The consequences of these anthropogenic activities on the survival of macrobenthic invertebrates major prey items of shorebirds and their habitats have been studied following proven scientific methods The dominance of humans and their population explosion are likely to competitively exclude many species of migrant shorebirds Declining food resources and reduced suitability of stopover sites have far reaching implications on the reproduction and survival of migrant shorebirds Climate change due to anthropogenic activities may exacerbate the situation The book focuses on the major environmental threats and suggests specific management plans for reducing the cumulative impacts on West Coast in General and Kadalundi Vallikkunnu Community Reserve in particular If the anthropogenic pressures on this ideal stopover site of transcontinental migrant shorebirds continue to escalate at the same pace the winged visitors may find other suitable habitats for wintering and foraging The music of the fluttering wings may be silenced if we do not wake up to this dire situation The authors are apprehensive of this silence settling on the shores all over the world

The Action Plan for Australian Birds 2020 Stephen T. Garnett, G Barry Baker, 2021-12 The Action Plan for Australian Birds 2020 is the most comprehensive review of the status of Australia's avifauna ever attempted The latest in a series of action plans for Australian birds that have been produced every decade since 1992 it is also the largest The accounts in this plan have been authored by more than 300 of the most knowledgeable bird experts in the country and feature far more detail than any of the earlier plans This volume also includes accounts of over 60 taxa that are no longer considered threatened mainly thanks to sustained conservation action over many decades This extensive book covers key themes that have emerged in the last decade including the increasing impact of climate change as a threatening process most obviously in Queensland's tropical rainforests where many birds are being pushed up the mountains However the effects are also indirect as happened in the catastrophic fires of 2019-20 Many of the newly listed birds are subspecies confined to Kangaroo Island where fire destroyed over half the population But there are good news stories too especially on islands where there have been spectacular successes with predator control Such uplifting results demonstrate that when action plans are followed by action on the ground threatened species can indeed be recovered and threats alleviated
