In Their Own Write Steven King, Paul Carter, Natalie Carter, Peter Jones, Carol Beardmore, 2022-12-15 Few subjects in European welfare history attract as much attention as the nineteenth century English and Welsh New Poor Law Its founding statute was considered the single most important piece of social legislation ever enacted and at the same time the coming of its institutions from penny pinching Boards of Guardians to the dreaded workhouse has generally been viewed as a catastrophe for ordinary working people Until now it has been impossible to know how the poor themselves felt about the New Poor Law and its measures how they negotiated its terms and how their interactions with the local and national state shifted and changed across the nineteenth century In Their Own Write exposes this hidden history Based on an unparalleled collection of first hand testimony pauper letters and witness statements interwoven with letters to newspapers and correspondence from poor law officials and advocates the book reveals lives marked by hardship deprivation bureaucratic intransigence parsimonious officialdom and sometimes institutional cruelty while also challenging the dominant view that the poor were powerless and lacked agency in these interactions The testimonies collected in these pages clearly demonstrate that both the poor and their advocates were adept at navigating the new bureaucracy holding local and national officials to account and influencing the outcomes of relief negotiations for themselves and their communities Fascinating and compelling the stories presented in In Their Own Write amount to nothing less than a new history of welfare from below

Genre Knowledge in Disciplinary Communication Carol Berkenkotter, Thomas N. Huckin, 2016-05-06 Although genre studies abound in literary criticism researchers and scholars interested in the social contexts of literacy have recently become interested in the dynamic rhetorical dimensions of speech genres Within this burgeoning scholarly community the authors are among the first researchers working within social science traditions to study genre from the perspective of the implicit knowledge of language users Thus this is the first sociocognitive study of genre using case study naturalistic research methods combined with the techniques of rhetorical and discourse analysis The term genre knowledge refers to an individual's repertoire of situationally appropriate responses to recurrent situations from immediate encounters to distanced communication through the medium of print and more recently the electronic media One way to study the textual character of disciplinary knowledge is to examine both the situated actions of writers and the communicative systems in which disciplinary actors participate. These two perspectives are presented in this book. The authors' studies of disciplinary communication examine operations of systems as diverse as peer review in scientific publications and language in a first grade science classroom. The methods used include case study and ethnographic techniques, rhetorical and discourse analysis of changing features within large corpora and in the texts of individual writers. Through the use of these techniques, the authors engaged in both micro level and macro level analyses and developed a perspective which reflects both foci. From this perspective, they propose that what micro level studies of actors' situated actions frequently depict as individual processes can also be interpreted from the macro level as communicative acts within a discursive network or system. The research methods and the theoretical framework presented are designed to raise provocative questions for scholars, researchers and teachers in a number of fields: linguists who teach and conduct research in ESP and LSP and are interested in methods for studying professional communication; scholars in the fields of communication, rhetoric and sociology of science with an interest in the textual dynamics of scientific and scholarly communities; educational researchers interested in cognition in context and composition; scholars interested in writing in the disciplines.
