

Movement that causes hairs to respond to vibrations along silk is also present in other media, such as air. Hearing requires hairs sensitive enough to bend or deflect with the movement of air particles that are compressed by sound, creating waves of compressed and decompressed molecules of air. For a given tone, there will be a characteristic wavelength between the peaks of each cycle of compression and decompression of particles. Hairs of different length or stiffness respond (for instance, deflect) best to specific wavelength frequencies, as in our inner ear. This is the basis of our tonal hearing—a high-frequency shriek is discernible from a low-frequency rumble. Recent work suggests that without ears, but instead using mechanosensory hairs, spiders also detect airborne sound, either directly, as in jumping spiders and ogre-faced spiders that can discern prey and predators 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ –10 ft (2–3 m) away through specific sound frequencies (tones) associated with their flight behavior, or in the case of web-builders, once again through the silk. In this case, the silk is so sensitive that the web itself pulses with sound at a distance and is thus detectable to the spiders, essentially transforming the web from a direct vibration sensor responsive to items contained within it, to a large antenna capable of detecting and localizing sound produced by a potential predator or prey from at least 33 ft (10 m) away.

GROUNDING ENERGIES

Yet another medium capable of transmitting vibrations is the ground. Anyone who has felt an earthquake will be well aware of this. Earthquakes contain a phenomenal amount of energy, while the pitter-patter of another spider or beetle walking about is another matter altogether, and these require very sensitive organs to be detected. Yet, organs sensitive enough to detect these tiny movements can also trigger appropriate responses in their owner. It is not as though smaller organisms somehow have better sensibility due to being small. This is constrained by biological needs, chemistry, and physics, and does not scale according to size. In fact, our understanding of some physics is challenged by spider sensory systems. Known as seismic vibrations, these substrate-borne movements can lead wandering spiders to potential mates, prey, or even rivals. Specific “drumbeats” can also be used as signals;

the knowledge that we can if so minded find abundance of cobwebs and their occupants by visiting the cellar or the tool house and probably we have all at times noticed with a languid interest large circular webs on our favourite rose bushes with a spider motionless in the centre But some spring or autumn morning when the night has been foggy and the sun has only just succeeded in dispersing the mists every bush and hedge is seen to be draped every square foot of lawn and meadow to be carpeted with spiders silk There has been no special activity in the domain of these creatures but every silken line is beaded with drops perhaps fifty times its diameter and what yesterday required careful observation to detect is now visible yards away and we realise for once something of the prodigious activity constantly going on though ordinarily unnoted And it never entirely ceases True hibernation if it ever occurs is not the rule among spiders and there is no time of the year when some species may not be found at work Beat trees or bushes over an old umbrella or sweep grass and herbage with a sweeping net in summer and you will never draw a blank some spiders are sure to be found In winter such measures are profitless but if you take the trouble to grub among ground vegetation or shake fallen leaves over a newspaper or search under stones or logs of wood you will have no difficulty in finding spiders enough and by no means dormant I have even seen an enthusiastic collector remove inches of snow and disinter rare species from among the roots of the grass beneath

Spiders Everywhere! Rachel Walker,2011-05-31 Like Little Miss Muffet some people suffer from arachnophobia which means fear of spiders but many others find them fascinating Very few of the 40 000 species are harmful some are quite popular as pets Most types of these busy little creatures do a great deal of good work in the world They are widely known but not always understood as many people believe that spiders are just another type of insect

Spiders Up Close Robin Birch,2005 Describes spiders including where they live their anatomy and their life cycles

Mammoth Cave Horton H. Hobbs III,Rickard A Olson,Elizabeth G Winkler,David C. Culver,2017-06-14 This book reveals the science and beauty of Mammoth Cave the world s longest cave which has played an important role in the natural sciences It offers a comprehensive and interdisciplinary treatment of the cave combining insights from leading experts in fields ranging from archeology and cultural history to life science and geosciences The first animals specialized for cave life in North America including beetles spiders crayfish and fish were discovered in Mammoth Cave in the 1840s It has also been used and explored by humans including Native Americans who mined its sulfate minerals and later African American slaves who made a map of the cave More recent stories include wars between commercial cave owners epic exploration trips by modern cave explorers and of course tourism The first section of the book is an extensive description including maps and photos of the cave its basic structural pattern and how it relates to the surface landscape The second section covers the human history of utilization and exploration of the cave including mining tourism and medical experiments

Cave science is the topic of the third section including geology hydrology mineralogy climatology paleontology ecology biodiversity and microbiology The fourth section looks to the future with an overview of environmental issues facing Mammoth Cave managers The book is intended for anyone interested in caves in general and Mammoth Cave in particular experts in one discipline seeking information about other areas and researchers and students interested in the many avenues of pursuit possible in Mammoth Cave

Ecophysiology of Spiders Wolfgang Nentwig, 2012-12-06 Recently another book on insect physiology was published It was restricted to a few focal points as are many of these new insect physiology books but there was considerable depth in its specialized point of view We were discussing the structure of this book and of insect physiology books in general when Prof Remmert asked me and what about books on spider physiology Silence Then I started to explain oh yes there is a congress proceedings volume on this topic and there is a group with excellent publications on another topic but I felt that this answer was weak One can no longer buy the proceedings volume in a bookshop and to read a series of publications on a given topic one must search in a library for a dozen journals Why is there not a single book on spider physiology comparable with the many books on insect physiology Are spiders a scientific ivory tower far from public interest and commercial importance I do not think so although spiders are one of the many forgotten animal groups which always grew in the shadow of the insects There are research groups working on spider physiology there are fascinating phenomena in this animal group and there are plenty of exciting results Spiders may have been always underresearched but research is progressing In the last few years new books have been published e g
