Colorblind Shakespeare Ayanna Thompson, 2006-09-12 The systematic practice of non traditional or colorblind casting began with Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival in the 1950s. Although colorblind casting has been practiced for half a century now it still inspires vehement controversy and debate. This collection of fourteen original essays explores both the production history of colorblind casting in cultural terms and the theoretical implications of this practice for reading Shakespeare in a contemporary context.

The Columbian Covenant: Race and the Writing of American History James Carson, 2014-12-18 This provocative analysis of American historiography argues that when scholars use modern racial language to articulate past histories of race and society they collapse different historical signs of skin color into a transhistorical and essentialist notion of race that implicates their work in the very racial categories they seek to transcend.

Namibia Godfrey Mwakikagile, 2015 The author looks at how Namibia was founded as a German colony known as Deutsch S dwestafrika German South West Africa and how it evolved into a nation. He explains how it was founded on brutal suppression of the indigenous people including extermination of large numbers of some groups and how on becoming a colony of South Africa its people continued to be subjected to brutal treatment by the white minority rulers who denied them racial equality. The author also focuses on the liberation struggle against apartheid and how the country won independence from apartheid South Africa. He also looks at how the leaders of the new nation are trying to build the country and construct a national identity on the basis of unity in diversity. It is an analysis of identity formation at the national level and consolidation of the state whose relevance is continental in scope. Studies of other African countries in their quest for unity and construction or reconstruction of their national identities during the post colonial era can benefit from this work. It is also a work of comparative analysis in terms of nationhood in the African context and how Namibia and Tanzania two case studies have sought to construct their national identities the obstacles they have faced and continue to face in the quest for national unity especially in the case of Namibia and why Tanzania has been more successful than most countries on the continent in building a cohesive society where tribalism is virtually non existent enabling it to consolidate its unity and national identity. The author also looks at the concept of national character and its relevance to national identity formation and why the national identities of different African countries are weak and what can be done to address the problem. It is also an introductory text which may be helpful to some people who are going to Namibia for the first time although it is essentially a scholarly work intended for members of the academic community and specialists in some fields dealing with this southwest African country and its people. But members of the general public who want to learn more about Namibia may also find the book to be useful.

Murder and the Reasonable Man Cynthia Lee, 2007-10-01 A man murders his wife after she has admitted her infidelity another man kills an openly gay teammate after receiving a massage a third man white goes for a jog in a bad neighborhood carrying a pistol and shoots an African American teenager who had his hands in his pockets When brought before the criminal justice system all three men argue that they should be found not guilty the first two use the defense of provocation while the third argues he used his gun in self defense Drawing upon these and similar cases Cynthia Lee shows how two well established traditional criminal law defenses the doctrines of provocation and self defense enable majority culture defendants to justify their acts of violence While the reasonableness requirement inherent in both defenses is designed to allow community input and provide greater flexibility in legal decision making the requirement also allows majority culture defendants to rely on dominant social norms such as masculinity heterosexuality and race i e racial stereotypes to bolster their claims of reasonableness At the same time Lee examines other cases that demonstrate that the reasonableness requirement tends to exclude the perspectives of minorities such as heterosexual women gays and lesbians and persons of color Murder and the Reasonable Man not only shows how largely invisible social norms and beliefs influence the outcomes of certain criminal cases but goes further suggesting three tentative legal reforms to address problems of bias and undue leniency Ultimately Lee cautions that the true solution lies in a change in social attitudes Closing the Opportunity Gap Prudence L. Carter, Kevin G.

Welner, 2013-04-26 While the achievement gap has dominated policy discussions over the past two decades relatively little attention has been paid to a gap even more at odds with American ideals the opportunity gap Opportunity and achievement while inextricably connected are very different goals Every American will not go to college but every American should be given a fair chance to be prepared for college In communities across the U S children lack the crucial resources and opportunities inside and outside of schools that they need if they are to reach their potential Closing the Opportunity Gap offers accessible research based essays written by top experts who highlight the discrepancies that exist in our public schools focusing on how policy decisions and life circumstances conspire to create the opportunity gap that leads inexorably to stark achievement gaps They also describe sensible policies grounded in evidence that can restore and enhance opportunities Moving beyond conventional academic discourse Closing the Opportunity Gap will spark vital new conversations about what schools parents educators and policymakers can and should do to give all children a fair chance to thrive
